The Rev. and Mrs. Amzi L. Armstrong Found Riddled with Shot in Their Home Near Trenton.

NEGRO SERVANT ARRESTED

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 24.—The Rev. Amzi L. Armstrong, the oldest minister in the Presbyterian Church in New Jersey and one of the oldest living graduates of Princeton, with his wife, Mrs. Anne Rue Armstrong, were murdered last night in the Colonial house in which they lived in the Dutch Neck section of Mercer County, 12 miles east of here.

Both were reading when shot to death, and when the body of the venerable minister was found early this morning it lay beside a volume of commentaries on the Bible, which he was reading when the murderer entered the room and fired a load of heavy shot into his breast. Mrs. Armstrong apparently had been reading in another room, and she was shot down as she was rushing to the aid of her husband.

No murder in the history of this section of the State has so stirred the people as has this one. Mr. Armstrong had for forty years been the stated clerk of the Presbytery of New Brunswick, and never had but one pastorate, that of the quaint little church in Old Dutch Neck, a few miles from Princeton.

Mrs. Armstrong was 41 years old, and was the second wife of the minister, to whom she was married some ten years ago. Mr. Armstrong, who was graduated from Princeton in 1852, was 83 years old, and had retired from the active pastorate of the Dutch Neck Church about a dozen years ago.

William J. Crossley, county prosecutor of Mercer County, ordered the arrest tonight of John Sears, a negro, who had worked for the Armstrongs for more than twenty-five years. The negro's mother was in the Armstrong's house when the murder was committed, but she vows she did not see it, and there is reason to believe that she is telling the truth.

The old negress, who had worked for the minister all her life, was in an upstairs room when the murders were done, and so great was her terror that she crawled under a bed and remained there for nearly six hours. She did not come out until her son returned home early yesterday morning from a trip to New Brunswick, where he went, according to the authorities, after the murders were committed.

The negro stoutly declares his innocence, but is unable to give a satisfactory account of his whereabouts between 8 and 9 P. M. on Wednesday, between which hours Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong are believed to have been killed.

The whole countryside for miles around is in great excitement over the murder, for the venerable clergyman was popular in this part of New Jersey. He was a patriarch among his brother ministers, and at the sessions of the Presbytery of New Brunswick he always had the seat of honor next to the Moderator. When he entered church on these occasions the other ministers, as a mark of their veneration, always stood until he was seated. He was a handsome man, with a great head of snow-white hair and a flowing silvery beard.

Robbery is believed to have been the motive of the murderer, for a fine old gold watch that had been handed down to the clergyman from another generation of Armstrongs is missing, as is also the wallet the aged man is known to have had on him. Mrs. Armstrong, who was wealthy in her own right, had some valuable jewels, and it is supposed that some of these at least were taken.

It was about 12:45 o'clock this morning when Sears, the negro under arrest, ran across the fields to the home of Joseph Coleman, a mile and a half from the home of the Armstrongs. Coleman was the nearest neighbor of the murdered couple. The negro was not greatly excited as he rapped on the door of the Coleman home.

When Coleman appeared he told him in a matter-of-fact sort of way that old Mr. Armstrong and his wife were both dead, and that he believed they had been murdered. Coleman hurried to the house, and the sight that met his eyes was one to stagger him.

Mr. Armstrong, as Coleman says, had married and buried the people around Dutch Neck for nearly sixty years. There was not a family in a dozen miles to whom he had not ministered in some way at some time during his ministry of more than half a century among them.

Coleman turned back at what he saw, and, hurrying away, aroused the neighbors. By 2 A. M. men, women, and children, some of them old people who knew and loved the venerable preacher all their lives, were hurrying to the Colonial house in which he lay dead.

Mr. Armstrong lay on his back beside the reading table in the drawing room, the open commentaries of the Bible beside him. There was a look of anguish on his face—a look that one of his parishioners described as one of great surprise, for the old man had not an enemy in the world.

The body of Mrs. Armstrong lay just inside the door leading from the dining room into the drawing room. She, too, had been reading, and the magazine was still open on the table where she had laid it when she jumped up to rush to the assistance of her husband. She had been shot exactly as had the minister, a charge of shot such as huntsmen use in shooting rabbits being fired into her breast. Both had died as they fell, according to the family physician, Dr. George H. Franklin.

"This terrible deed was done hours ago," said Dr. Franklin, as he rose from his knees after examining the bodies. He said that the crime had probably been committed six hours before. On investigation it was found that this tallied with the time that Sears is said to have taken

PHELPS DODGE AGENT HELD.

A. W. Finch, Representing Firm in London, Charged with $125,000 Fraud.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A. W. Finch, the London agent of Phelps, Dodge & Co. of New York, was remanded for one week in the Mansion House Court to-day, charged with having defrauded his employers of $125,000 received in payment of a consignment of copper.

Finch surrendered to the police at Liverpool yesterday.

James Douglas, President of Phelps, Dodge & Co., said last night that Finch, the London agent of the firm, had been a month or more in hiding following the discovery of alleged frauds to the amount of $125,000. The thefts, he said, had gone on for some time, and were of several consignments of money sent by the firm. Finch, he continued, had speculated in copper with the money so obtained. He was not aware of the details of the alleged fraud nor how it had been discovered.

At the home of William Church Osborn, a Director of the firm, it was said that Mr. Osborn had retired, and could not discuss the case, but Mrs. Osborn said she had heard the thefts in the London office had been carried on by Finch as long as six months ago.

At Police Headquarters there was no record of the case.

Baron von Eckardstein Had Appendicitis Crossing on Mauretania.

Baron Hermann von Eckardstein, who arrived last night on the Cunard liner Mauretania from Liverpool, was successfully operated upon during the voyage for appendicitis, and on his arrival was sufficiently recovered to be taken in a private ambulance to Dr. Bull's private sanitarium, in East Thirty-third Street. The Baron, who weighs 280 pounds and is 6 feet 4 inches tall, was taken ill on Monday morning. Dr. B. Sydney Jones consulted with Dr. Frederick Coerr of New York, who was among the passengers on board, and they decided that it was a case of appendicitis, and that it would be necessary to operate at once.

Preparations were made in the ship's hospital and Dr. Coerr, assisted by Dr. Jones, performed the operation, anaesthetics being administered by Dr. J. Frank Nicholson, the assistant surgeon of the ship.

"It took place just before dinner on Monday," Dr. Coerr said, "and was a little difficult, as there was a perforation in the appendix. The ship was going at full speed.

"The Baron is a very strong man and has passed the danger point. There is no reason to doubt that he will recover his health with a little careful nursing."

Baron von Eckhardstein was attached to the German Embassy at Washington for a number of years, and later married the only daughter of the late Sir John Blundell Maple, the wealthy furniture dealer and race horse owner. In 1907 she brought an action for separation on the ground of cruelty, which principally consisted, it was said, in making her pay his gambling debts, which she stated amounted to $2,000,000.

HORSE SWIMMING ALONGSIDE

The sudden appearance of a horse with a bridle and collar swimming in the bay off the Battery at the foot of Whitehall Street attracted the attention of all passengers on the crowded Municipal ferryboat Castleton yesterday afternoon. The ferryboat was just enteing her pier when the cry went up that a horse was overboard. Capt. Stockin stopped the boat while the crowd watched Thomas Gallagher, bridgeman at the ferry station, and Thomas O'Rourke, the doorman, try to rescue the animal with a boathook.

No one seemed to know where the horse came from. It was a bay and seemed to have no trouble keeping afloat. As it was headed for Governors Island when first seen it is thought that it came down the North River. Gallagher saw it first. His eyes bulged when he saw what looked like a sea serpent in the water about 100 feet from the slip. He called to O'Rourke, and together they made out a horse. The horse disappeared several times, but always came to the surface. Once it came close enough to the pier for Gallagher to slip the point of a boathook under its collar.

The horse did not seem to relish the attempt to rescue it and swam toward the East River, almost dragging Gallagher and O'Rourke after him. The horse swam rapidly toward the East River. Then it turned and started back in the direction of Governors Island. After the ferryboat was docked a small boat was lowered and several men started after the horse. Although hundreds watched it swim away, no one could tell where it went.

A hurry call was sent to Sergt. Ellis of the Harbor Squad, and he searched for the animal in his patrol boat for over an hour. He went up as far as the Brooklyn Bridge and all round Governors Island, but no trace of the animal could be found. The horse was a good swimmer, and seemed to have little trouble stemming the strong ebb tide. Gallagher said it looked like a carriage horse.

HIS STATUES COST HIM DEAR

George G. Barnard Says He Loses $50,000 on Harrisburg Groups.

George Grey Barnard, the sculptor, arrived last night on the Cunard liner Mauretania, after shipping to this country the two monster marble groups, "The Burdenbearer" and "Brotherly Love," which are to grace the entrance of the new Capitol building at Harrisburg, Penn. Mr. Barnard spent seven years on them at his studio at Moret, near Paris. There are thirty separate statues in the groups, and Mr. Barnard declared that he was much relieved when the last one was shipped on the Adriatic.

It was of these groups that Jean Laurens, the artist, declared that there was not creative genius enough among Frenchmen to turn out such pure art as yet. Mr. Barnard will lose $50,000 on the work unless the State of Pennsylvania comes to his aid.

The groups were contracted for at $100,000. The figures are 10 and 11 feet high, and to make them it was necessary to make 104 models of different sizes. The pedestals are 12 by 6 feet and the bas-reliefs from which the figures extend are 21 feet high.

"I used some forty models," said Mr. Barnard. "It was difficult to find just what was wanted and I had to pass upon many hundreds to get results. It would be impossible to obtain such models in America. The heads on many of the figures are American, while the models were French or Italian."

MADERO WOUNDED IN FIGHT IN MEXICO

REVOLT BEING SUPPRESSED

Reports Agree That the Government Has Gained the Upper Hand—Reyes Not Aiding Rebels.

EAGLE PASS, Texas, Nov. 24.—The Mexican commander in Ciudad Porfirio Diaz this evening informed Customs Collector R. W. Dowe that Francisco I. Madero, the Mexican revolutionary leader, was badly wounded in a fight to-day at Guerrero between his forces and 200 rurales and cavalry commanded by Col. Fuentes and Lieut. Valdez.

The Mexican commander stated that his advices had come direct from a trustworthy citizen of Guerrero, who came in to-day.

According to the report, Madero was leading his forces when Federal troops engaged them. The engagement was fierce, though brief.

Madero was seen to fall from his horse and was carried to the rear as his force fell back. The Federal troops are reported to have followed up their advantage, scattering the rebels, who took to the hills. The nature of Madero's wound is unknown.

Mr. Dowe said to-night that he would wait for absolute confirmation before making any official report.

CIUDAD PORFIRIO DIAZ, Mexico, Nov. 24.—The Mexican Government has ordered the confiscation of all the property of Francisco I. Madero, leader of the revolutionists.

Madero has large landed interests in Northern Mexico and owns valuable property in the City of Monterey.

But even if Madero should lose all his property in Mexico he would not be a poor man. It is known that he has investments in New York, and his holdings of Continental securities are said to be large.

Arms and ammunition in large quantities, shipped from St. Louis and New York, have been seized by the Government forces in the mining camps at San Pedro, Santa Barbara, and other points, according to reports received here to-day. These military supplies are said to have been shipped several weeks ago as mine supplies, &c.

It is asserted that more than $75,000 worth of modern rifles, cartridges, and high-power explosives have been taken by the Diaz troops since Sunday, most of them being shipments from the United States.

FINDS REPORTS EXAGGERATED.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 24.—Border reports about Mexico have been greatly exaggerated. From official assurances and reports we have received from our own correspondents, I am satisfied that the Government forces are amply able to control the situation in the northern States of Mexico.

PAUL HUDSON,
President of the Mexican Herald.

REBELS APPARENTLY LOSING.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 25.—The Times prints the following telegram, dated yesterday, from its correspondent in Mexico City:

It is reported to-day that the authorities are getting the upper hand, but everything is rumor. This is largely the Government's fault, as it has been withholding for days news from outlying parts, whether good or bad. The Federal telegraph is obstructed and the use of the railway telegraph lines is prohibited. The policy is a shortsighted one, as it favors the dissemination of rumors of local origin and makes it impossible to verify news.

It is therefore not believed that Madero has enrolled the Yaqui Indians or that in Chihuahua 600 reluctant troops were disarmed.

The army is apparently loyal, though it must be remembered that Gen. Reyes is the idol of all ranks, and his rumored return from Paris would be a disquieting factor. He might, however, possibly reenter the Cabinet.

It is thought that the revolutionaries are in possession of Ciudad Guerrero, a small town in the north. The last few days have seen outbreaks in various parts of the country. Some have been anti-Governmental and some anti-American, though the motives are not always easy to distinguish. Sentiment against the United States appears to be strong. The spark was set to it by the recent lynching of the Mexican Rodriguez in Texas—a lynching of which it may be remarked the local Mexicans fully approved. It has been most apparent in Guadalajara, the birthplace of Rodriguez. The rising there has been serious, though there is no truth in a report that the mob attacked the British Consul's house in mistake for the American Consul's. Troops supported by machine guns now occupy the city, and stringent steps have been taken to preserve order.

The revolutionists under Madero are well-armed but badly organized. It is believed by some observers that the whole thing will be forgotten in a month.

The authorities express complete confidence. Great precaution, military and other, are being taken by the Government. The sale of guns and ammunition, even to sportsmen, is forbidden throughout the republic. Many bullfights have been prohibited. One opposition journal, whose attitude was perhaps rather violent, was recently suppressed and the editor of another has been imprisoned.

Anti-Government manifestations began in Puebla, but they seem to have been confined to one heroic though misguided family, who withstood the troops for six hours and caused many casualties.

At Orizaba, where there are important factories and where long-standing economic discontent provided recruits for

PENNED IN A SHAFT AFTER AN EXPLOSION

HELD PRISONERS FOR HOURS

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 24.—While six men were working in the excavation of the new Catskill Aqueduct 200 feet below the northern part of Croton Lake this afternoon, in what is known as the siphon dip of the aqueduct, two other Italian laborers carried to a little frame shack near the opening of the shaft that leads to the aqueduct fifty pounds of gunpowder each. The powder, which was to have been used in blasting, was touched off in some undiscovered way about an hour after the laborers had left the shanty, and exploded with a roar that could be heard for many miles.

All the laborers, except the six at the bottom of the shaft, were at a safe distance at the time, with the exception of Michael Dietto, the engineer in charge, who sat alone, smoking his pipe in his engine house, at the head of the shaft, and about 1,200 feet from the shack where the powder had been placed. The force of the explosion wrecked both the shack and the engine house completely, and threw the engineer many yards from his post, literally blown to pieces.

As the wooden framework of the engine house crumbled several heavy beams of it crashed downward toward the machinery that operates the elevator in which laborers are carried up and down the shaft. One beam struck the brake handle, releasing the heavy wooden cage that had been brought to the top of the shaft. It crashed at full speed downward.

Two of the laborers in the aqueduct passage were standing near the bottom of the shaft at the time, about to signal for the cage in which they and their comrades should be lifted to the air. The others were still at work further in the aqueduct, under the bottom of the lake. At the sound of the crashing of the timbers above and the falling cage the two men looked up and then jumped aside just in time to escape the elevator car as it crashed to the bottom of the shaft, where it was twisted into a mass of débris that choked the passage and all but blotted out the air and light.

The other laborers ran up and signaled their distress to the engineer above. But there was no response. Again and again they sent up the signal for help, but no reply came from the choked-up shaft above them.

It was not until three hours later that the first of the workmen on the ground above managed to dig deeply enough into the débris that choked the shaft to let the six men imprisoned in the aqueduct passage know that help was at hand, and it was not till five hours after the accident that the débris was sufficiently cleared to extricate the men. The timbers and ruins of the former elevator cage and the rocks fallen from the walls of the shaft were lifted out by means of horses and a windlass, and later, in an improvised cage, the six men were lifted out. Except for the shock and uneasiness attendant upon their long imprisonment underground they were none the worse for the accident.

The cause of the explosion could not be ascertained to-night, nor was Coroner Squire able to learn the names of the two men who had carried the gunpowder into the shack in the first place. He will hold an investigation to-morrow. The damage of the explosion consisted chiefly in the wreckage of the wooden buildings and elevator cage; that to the shaft itself was slight.

HAMILTON'S BIPLANE AFIRE.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 24.—While Charles K. Hamilton, the American aviator who flew from New York to Philadelphia and back last June for THE NEW YORK TIMES, was cranking the engine of his Hamiltonian biplane to-day, it backfired, the gasoline of the carburetor igniting, and in turn setting fire to the wings of the machine. The flimsy material burned swiftly and about two square yards were consumed and the frame damaged before the flames could be extinguished.

Hamilton was preparing to race the Hamiltonian against Joe Seymour in his 120-horsepower racing automobile, and the match had to be called off. The Bleriot monoplane flown by Rene Simon broke a stay on alighting from a flight to-day. These are the first accidents of the meet.

Four machines were in the air simultaneously this morning, Garros, Simon, Barrier, and Frisbie being the aviators participating. The latter's Rochester biplane had motor trouble and only stayed up one minute. The French aviators were cheered heartily when they concluded their performance, and the three were taken in an auto to the judge's stand and there introduced to the crowd separately. On the stand were the Misses Moisant, sisters of John B. Moisant, winner of the Statue of Liberty race at the recent international meet in New York, who will arrive Saturday to participate in the meet.

General Change of Time Pennsylvania Railroad.
A general change will be made in the timetables of the Pennsylvania Railroad System on Sunday, November 27. The Pennsylvania Station in the heart of New York City will be placed in service on that date, and important changes will be made in the time of trains at New York.—Adv.

THREE MEN DROWN AS LAUNCH CAPSIZES

At Risk of Their Lives Other Fishermen Rescue One Out of Four.

TWO VICTIMS SWEPT AWAY

While returning from a fishing trip in a twenty-five foot launch yesterday afternoon, three Brooklyn men were drowned when the launch ran on a sandy shoal about a mile off Rockaway Point in the Atlantic and overturned. Another man in the party of four was rescued at the last moment. The dead are Joseph Hagstron of 12 Prospect Place and Louis Hopper and Louis Kester of 9 Van Brunt Street, Brooklyn. The rescued man is Bernard Lundquist of 647 Baltic Street, Brooklyn.

Hagstron, who was a music teacher and owner of the launch Wanderer, decided to take his friends Hopper, Kester, and Lundquist on a holiday fishing trip east of the Rockaways and several miles out in the Atlantic. Hagstron kept his launch, which had a twelve horse-power engine and was considered very fast, in Sheepshead Bay, near the hotel kept by Frederic Lundy, the Kings County Registrar. The launch had a hunting cabin, and was considered seaworthy. The party met at Lundy's wharf early yesterday morning, and made a quick trip to the banks was made.

Leaving the banks shortly after noon after an indifferent catch, Hagstron, who was running the engine, started for home. Although there was a heavy sea, everything went well until the launch was about a mile east of Rockaway Point.

There is a treacherous shoal there, and seamen give it a wide berth. It extends about half a mile into the ocean, and to avoid it it is necessary to steer well to the southwest. As it was getting late and the sea was unusually rough, Hagstron decided to make a short cut by running over the shoal. He oreder Lundquist, who was at the wheel and unacquainted with the locality, to turn to the east and hug the Rockaway shore.

Making Fast Time.

The launch was running at a fast clip when it suddenly grounded. At the same moment a heavy breaker struck her broadside on and overturned her. Hagstron, Hopper, and Kester were in the cabin at the time rearranging their fishing tackle, and had no chance to escape. Bloomquest, at the wheel, jumped clear of the boat.

Hagstron kicked out the front window of the cabin and tried to crawl through. He stuck half way, and Lundquist, a good swimmer, went to his assistance. After a struggle he managed to get Hagstron through, although both were badly cut by the jagged glass. Both then turned their attention to Hopper and Kester. They were pinned under the boat somewhere.

Despite their wounds and the icy water, Hagstrom and Lundquist clung to the bottom of the overturned boat and shouted for help. After they had been in the water about an hour the Rose R, an auxilliary sloop with several men and women aboard, who had also been to the fishing banks, came along. The sloop is owned by August Rau of 151 Frost Street, Brooklyn, and was on her way to Canarsie, Jamaica Bay.

At the risk of grounding his own boat, Capt. Rau struck across the bar to the overturned launch. The party on deck could plainly hear the cries for help from the two men, and the women aboard the sloop urged the Captain and crew to the rescue.

Coming alongside the launch, Capt. Rau threw a rope to Hagstron, who seemed to be on the verge of sinking. Hagstron grabbed one end of the rope and let go the launch. Before he was half way to the sloop his hold on the rope gave way and he sank. Samuel Van Hauten of Ninety-fourth Street and Avenue L, Canarsie, mate of the sloop, had thrown a rope to Lundquist also, but seeing what had happened to Hagstron, Hauten hastily threw off his heavy seaman's coat and boots and plunged into the surf, tying one end of the rope about his waist. He reached Lundquist, who was on the point of sinking, and dragged him to the side of the sloop. Once he slipped from the mate's grasp, but was caught again before he sank. A deck hand pulled both aboard with a boat hook. Lundquist told the mate that two more men were in the cabin and then fell unconscious.

Capt. Rau then followed his mate's example. He peeled off his coat and boots and tying a rope about his waist went after Hagstron. When he couldn't find him he swam to the overturned launch and broke in the rest of the cabin windows.

Hauter having got Lundquist aboard the sloop, returned to the launch and assisted Capt. Rau to get at the other imprisoned men. They finally tore away enough of the cabin to get a look inside, but nothing could be seen of Hopper and Kester. The women and men aboard the Rose R cheered Capt. Rau and the mate and stood ready with ropes and boathooks. Both Rau and Hauten dived several times under the launch but could find no trace of the two men.

Had a Hard Struggle.

Rau and Hauten had a hard fight getting back to their own boat. The breakers were so high and strong that they could make little headway. After a severe struggle they finally got near enough to seize a boathook and were dragged on board.

The sloop stood by for half an hour longer and just as it was about to leave one of the women saw a body being washed on the part of the shoal that showed above the water. Van Hauten again plunged into the water with a rope about him and swam to the beach. It was the body of Hagstron. After hard work he finally got it aboard the sloop.

With all speed the Rose R. made for Canarsie. The run was made in short order, the men and women doing their best to revive Hagstron and Lundquist. After a time Lundquist responded to the heroic treatment and was soon out of danger. Hagstrom was past resuscitation.

Landing at Canarsie, a call was sent to St. Mary's Hospital, and a surgeon responded. He soon had Lundquist as well as ever.

When he was told of the fate of his companions Lundquist broke down and wept.

"I am afraid to go home and tell their wives and children," he moaned. "I was the only unmarried one of the lot. The others have wives and little children. Some one else will have to break the news to them; I cannot.

"It was all over so suddenly that I don't know what happened. Hagstron owned the launch, and he was proud of her. He made many trips in her and never had any trouble. I do not know what possessed him to take that short cut, but he must have thought it was all right. I guess he figured that the tide was higher than it was. We were going along at a great rate, the three others in the cabin and myself at the wheel. All of a sudden the boat seemed to stand still. Before we knew what had happened a huge breaker slapped us, and over we went. My being at the wheel saved me."

"ST. LOUIS LIMITED" QUICKENED.

Adopt Resolutions and Send Them to Commons—Parliament Ends Monday.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The House of Lords, without a division, to-night adopted the resolutions of Lord Lansdowne, the opposition leader, and decided to send them, together with Lord Rosebery's plans for the reformation of the membership of the Lords, to the House of Commons. The upper chamber then adjourned until Monday, when the dissolution of Parliament will take place. Thus the Government's veto bill has been ignored by the House of Lords.

A noticeable feature of the debate has been the number of Liberal peers who supported Lord Lansdowne's scheme and opposed the Government's Veto bill.

In the debate on the Lansdowne resolutions Baron Loreburn, Lord Chancellor, incidentally avowed himself strongly in favor of home rule for Ireland.

"We shall never," he said, "get the complete accord which is our desire with the United States unless we get rid of the Irish difficulty, nor shall we have that complete and harmonious friendship of the great self-governing colonies unless we find some such solution of the problem as is recommended by the Parliaments of Canada and Australia."

R. T. WILSON CRITICALLY ILL.

Richard T. Wilson, head of the banking firm of R. T. Wilson & Co., is in a critical conditon at his home, 511 Fifth Avenue. Mr. Wilson, who is 80 years old, has been in poor health for four years. About three years ago a weakness of the heart developed, and frequently since then his condition has been such that heroic measures have been found necessary to save his life. Dr. Austin Flint was at Mr. Wilson's bedside last night.

Mr. Wilson, until about four years ago, was daily at his offices, but since then he has been living in retirement. He has spent his Winters at his city home and his Summers at Newport.

MILLIONS IN COTTON FRAUDS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Commenting on the arrest yesterday by Post Office Inspectors of John W. Knight, senior member of the cotton brokerage firm of Knight, Yancey & Co., Decatur, Ala., Postmaster General Hitchcock said today that the operations of this concern probably would exceed $1,000,000. The alleged fraud was committed, he says, by the use of bogus bills of lading covering fictitious shipments, and foreign importers were the chief victims.

Mr. Hitchcock said that the transactions of Knight, Yancey & Co. were similar to those of another concern of Corinth, Miss., whose members were indicted recently on evidence procured by Post Office Inspectors. The investigation developed, declared Mr. Hitchcock, that the two concerns had an arrangement by which they exchanged drafts, each holding power of attorney for the other to accept such drafts, and that together they committed frauds aggregating between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

10 CENTS MORE FOR TUNNEL.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Nov. 24.—Notices were posted in all stations of the New York & Long Branch Railroad today informing all holders of tickets, whether commutation, excursion, or straight, that they must pay an additional ten cents to use the new Pennsylvania Station after it opens for business on Sunday morning, and that tickets must be purchased from agents permitting the transfer to electric trains at Harrison.

This will bring the excursion fare from his place to $1.95 instead of $1.75 as charged to the present terminals of the Pennsylvania and Jersey Central roads.

Pennsylvania trains to Jersey City ran to-day through the new junction at Harrison and passengers had an excellent opportunity on most of them to see the big, new electric locomotives in operation on the parallel tracks.

PRINCE AN AMERICAN CITIZEN

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 24.—"I have no use for the title, but the Russian Government will not permit me to discard it any more than to change my name. I renounce it just the same."

With these words, Prince Nicholas Troubetzkoy, whose cousin married Amelie Rives Chanler, the author, became an American citizen yesterday. Judge Houser of the Superior Court told him that he could not retain his title and be an American citizen, but the Prince did not hesitate to renounce it.

Troubetzkoy has been a resident of Los Angeles for five years. His son was born here.

ROBBED BY MASQUERADER.

Brooklyn Mechanic Had $2,000 and a Gold Watch Taken from Him.

With his head cut and bruised and his eyes discolored, John Bothwell, a mechanic, of 277 Nostrand Avenue, Brooklyn, wandered into Bellevue Hospital at a late hour last night in a dazed condition. He told the surgeons that he had been attacked near the corner of First Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, and robbed of $2,000 in cash and a gold watch and chain half an hour before.

A policeman took Bothwell to the East Thirty-fifth Street station. There he told the detectives that a party of men masquerading in all sorts of costumes surrounded him and made a combined attack on him. After knocking him down they robbed him of his money and jewelry.

Detectives who went in search of his assailants found all the street lights near the corner of First Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street had been extinguished. Thus far no arrests have been made.

MUTINEERS FIRE ON RIO JANEIRO

CONGRESS HASTENS TO ACT

OFFICERS SLAIN ON VESSEL

Two Other Officers Killed—Woman and Two Children Lose Their Lives by the Bombardment.

RIO JANIERO, Nov. 24.—The crews of the two new dreadnoughts and other vessels of the Brazilian Navy have mutinied, have killed three officers, have turned their guns upon the loyal ships, and have thrown shells into this city, which have killed three persons.

The mutiny, which started on the night of Nov. 22 on board the dreadnought Minas Geraes and subsequently extended to other vessels of the fleet, is in a critical stage to-night.

The mutineers to-day sent to the Government a strong worded ultimatum, demanding increase in pay and the abolition of corporal punishment and several other unpopular regulations.

The Senate, which had been called in extraordinary session to consider the situation, voted unanimously in favor of amnesty to the rebels, but the Chamber, after discussing the matter most of the day, adjourned without taking final action.

To-night the battleship Sao Paulo and the cruiser Bahia withdrew from the harbor, but the battleship Minas Geraes took up a position opposite the Government Palace. In the course of the day an effort was made through Deputy Carvalho to induce the mutineers to surrender, but they refuse to do so until the Government grants their demands.

It is officially declared that the mutiny is entirely without political character and is looked upon merely as an effort on the part of the sailors to enforce certain demands for concessions from their officers.

The Start of the Revolt.

About 10 o'clock on the night of Nov. 22, as Capt. Neves, commanding the battleship Minas Geraes, came back from dinner on board the French training ship Duguay Trouin he heard a violent uproar and a fusillade of shots. It was the crew of his vessel who had mutinied.

Capt. Neves and two other officers offered resistance to some of the sailors and were killed, and another officer was mortally wounded. The mutinous crew meanwhile shouted, "Long Live Liberty."

The insurrectionary movement then started on board the other new Brazilian dreadnought, the battleship Sao Paolo, and the scout ship Bahia. All the officers having been landed, a plain sailor of the first class, named Jean Candido, took command of the squadron.

Ammunition was provided, provisions were requisitioned, and a coal depot on the Isle of Vienna was taken. Vessels were prevented from transporting coal destined for the French steamer Atlantique and the English ship Oronsa.

The movement was declared to be without political significance. The mutineers sent a message by radiograph to President Fonseca setting forth their claims for the immediate abolition of corporal punishment on board ship, an increase in their pay according to the programme submitted to Congress some time ago, and diminution of the work with which they are burdened owing to the maintenance of incomplete crews. The statement added that a bombardment of the city and of other ships in the harbor would follow the refusal of the demands.

The Government refrained from replying to the ultimatum of the mutineers, and a moderately severe fire was soon opened by the sailors upon the city. This continued at intervals all night. The inhabitants of Rio Janeiro were thrown into confusion by the suddenness of the event.

On the morning of the 23d there was further firing on the city by the mutineers, the shots coming at infrequent intervals. Little damage to the city resulted from the bombardment, however.

It has been learned that besides Capt. Neves and the two officers, several sailors were killed.

Destroyers Remain Loyal.

The torpedo boat destroyers remained loyal and anchored in the furthest corner of the bay.

At 7 o'clock yesterday morning the Minas Geraes, the Sao Paulo, the Bahia, and the battleship Marshal Florian crossed the bar and fired on the fortress, which refrained from responding. Curious crowds gathered on the water front and watched the vessels manoeuvre. Surprise was expressed at the precision with which the giant fighting ships were handled by the sailor crews. It was difficult to imagine the absence of all officers from the vessels.

Once outside the bar the squadron put about and again entered the bay, took up a position opposite the city, and fired the big guns from all quarters of the ships. A shot from a small-calibre gun entered a house on Castello Hill, in the centre of the city, killing two children and a woman.

During the day shots were particularly directed at the Marine Arsenal. About 1 o'clock in the afternoon a small boat flying a white flag went alongside the Sao Paulo. It carried Deputy Carvalho, a retired naval officer, who desired to talk with the mutineers. A little later the Deputy returned to shore and made a report to the Chamber of Deputies, which had been convened in special session to deal with the revolt. The entire membership of the Chamber declared its support of the Government.

In the Senate Senator Ruy Barbosa, in the name of the Opposition, made similar announcement of the Senate's support of the Government.

Later Deputy Carvalho again went out to the Sao Paulo, carrying conditions of surrender to the mutineers. The crew, however, declared their intention not to surrender until the National Congress had voted a measure of general amnesty.

Amnesty Is Probable.

The Chamber of Deputies closed its meeting and adjourned until to-morrow with the question of amnesty for the mutineers still under discussion. It is thought that amnesty will be granted by a small majority.

Last night the mutinying ships withdrew from the harbor, but returned to-day at noon.

The French training ship Duguay Truin left the harbor without hindrance yesterday afternoon, passing near the Minas Geraes. The band of the Minas Geraes saluted the French ship with the "Marseillaise," the crew lining up on the quarterdeck and cheering the Frenchmen.

The mutiny has no political significance, according to the statement of all Government officials and political leaders.

The British Minister to-day notified the Brazilian Government that any attempt to destroy the mutinous war vessels by torpedoes would involve the safety of British subjects on board.

The Right Hon. James Bryce, British Ambassador to the United States, and Mrs. Bryce to-day breakfasted at the Foreign Office as the guests of Baron Rio Branco, the Brazilian Foreign Minister.

BRAZIL'S HUGE WARSHIPS.

The Brazilian Navy at present numbers fourteen vessels. The three latest, of which two are already built, are perhaps the most powerful dreadnoughts in the world. The keels for these boats were laid in 1907. Before the advent of these dreadnoughts Brazil had but one battleship, one first-class cruiser, one second-class cruiser, three third-class cruisers, and five gunboats. The most powerful ship among them was the Riachuelo, which displaced but 5,700 tons and had an indicated horse power of 7,000. She was built in 1883 and cost $1,825,000. The officers and men of the navy number 8,000.

A dispatch from London in July of this year stated that the new Brazilian battleship Rio Janeiro would be by far the biggest in the world. Her displacement is 32,000 tons and she has twelve 14-inch guns. Her cost will be, approximately, $14,500,000. According to this, the Rio Janeiro will be almost twice the size of the original British Dreadnought, which displaces 17,500 tons. The British Lion, to be launched in August, will have a displacement of only 26,000 tons and will be the largest ship in the British navy.

The first of the Brazilian battleships to be launched was the Minas Geraes, at Newcastle-on-Tyne on Sept. 9, and it was christened by Mme. Regis de Oliveira, wife of the Brazilian Minister to Great Britain. This vessel has a displacement approaching 20,000 tons and carries a main armament of twelve 12-inch guns mounted like those on the battleships which were then being built for Japan; so that ten of them can be fired simultaneously on either broadside, eight in a line, with the keel ahead, and eight in a line with the keel astern. This ship, like the others, was constructed in England under the supervision of Brazilian naval officers.

The Sao Paulo, the second of these Dreadnoughts, was successfully launched at Barrow-in-Furness on April 17, 1909, in the presence of a large gathering of South American diplomats and naval officers. The vessel is a sister ship of the Minas Geraes and was also named by the wife of the Brazilian Minister.

When these battleships were building, a rumor said to have had its origin in Berlin, stirred the British press, to the effect that the three warships were to be launched to fly the German flag and that they were to be conveyed by the Brazilian Government to Germany on payment of $20,000,000.

Fonseca Not Long in Power.

President Fonseca, who has faced a naval crisis within a week of his inauguration, was Minister of War under the previous administration, and for years advocated the reorganization of the army and the employment of European military officers in carrying out this plan. He is the foremost authority in South America on military affairs.

He has favored the fortification of the rivers of the country as well as the building of a squadron of gunboats to patrol them, and the establishment of naval bases and coaling stations. It was also his belief that by forming an "alliance" the principal South American republics could so fortify themselves that they could successfully resist not only the revolutionists but other countries.

Following his election last March he visited the capitals of Europe apparently with a political object, and it was evident that Brazil, under the leadership of its President-elect, was eager to impress herself as a country soon to attain great power among the nations.

Fonseca was elected President of Brazil in March of this year and inaugurated on Nov. 15. The streets of Rio Janeiro were crowded and there was a great military pageant. Five battleships from France, Portugal, Argentina, and Uruguay were sent there for the ceremony.

IN ASYLUM NEARLY 50 YEARS.

Upon His Death John G. Coster's Identity Becomes Known.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 24.—The identity of a patient who died yesterday in Bloomingdale Asylum after being confined there for nearly half a century was made known after some secrecy had been thrown around it while he lived. The Asylum authorities said the patient was John G. Coster. He was 78 years old and at the time he was sent to Bloomingdale from Brooklyn he was thirty. So far as can be learned he has no living relatives. He was buried in Greenwood Cemetery.

At the Asylum it was said that Mr. Coster had died from senile dementia. His closest friend was Henry Keale of 421 Decatur Street, Brooklyn. Mr. Coster is said to have left a large estate.

64.2 MILES AN HOUR TO PHILADELPHIA

90 MILES IN 96 MINUTES

But This Includes 12 Minutes for Delays and Stops—40 Seconds to the Mile Over Some Good Stretches.

Coincident with the opening of the new Pennsylvania station next Sunday morning, with resultant shortening of the time of travel to the heart of New York, the running time of all through trains on the rival Jersey Central Railroad will be cut to one hour and fifty minutes between New York and Philadelphia in both directions. The significance of this announcement when it was made by the Jersey Central officials on Wednesday was not fully appreciated by the public, but it heralds the beginning of faster running of trains in a continuous day service than has yet been seen in America, or probably in the world. The schedule time of the trains will be cut an even ten minutes.

After this week they will make the run of 90 miles even, between Philadelphia and Jersey City, in 96 minutes flat, or at a speed of 56¼ miles an hour for the entire distance. Operating officials of the Jersey Central explained yesterday that in fact the actual running time would be twelve minutes less than this, that allowance being made for stops and slowdowns, the latter notably over the Newark Bay draw bridge, which all engineers are forbidden to cross in less than four minutes. This brings the average speed to 64.285 miles an hour.

On the best running stretches, such as from Trenton Junction inward and from Bound Brook to Elizabeth, the trains will attain a speed of something less than 40 seconds to the mile. This record exceeds by a small margin anything done regularly on the two lines from Philadelphia to Atlantic City, which are generally recognized by railroad men as the fastest railroad divisions in America, if not in the world. The Jersey Central officials say that no other railroad anywhere can boast anything to equal this.

The Jersey Central and the Reading jointly were the pioneers in two-hour trains between Philadelphia and New York, and with the constant betterment of the service under Vice President William G. Besler, the present General Manager, the idea of still further reducing the time has been steadily growing. Some of the Jersey Central engineers have long been confident that they could easily make the run of ninety miles in an even ninety minutes on regular schedule. In fact, it was demonstrated several times by experiments over selected sections of track in varying conditions of load and weather that the run could be made.

One very fast train called the "Merimaid," the name being selected by school children along the road in competition for a $25 prize, was installed in the Summer of 1909. This was a light train with a high wheel locomotive. It ran from Scranton, down the Lehigh and Wyoming valleys to the North Jersey coast resorts without touching New York at all. It ran on alternate days up and down, and was continued last Summer as a daily. It often scored 37 seconds to the mile and never met with the slightest mishap.

The announcement of the new fast service follows closely upon the stealing of the Jersey Central's thunder, "Every hour and on the hour," by the Pennsylvania for its Philadelphia-New York trains from the new station. The Jersey Central now adds to its announcement of lightning service the words "no tunnels."

The fastest regular train in these parts hitherto has been the Pennsylvania eighteen-hour special to Chicago, which is making the run of eighty-four miles from Jersey City to North Philadelphia in 83 minutes. It is not the policy of either railroad, however, to brag about speed records. They see business reasons for not doing so, among them that they do not wish rivals to know just what they can do, but trainmen tell regular travelers of one train special on the Pennsylvania which a few years ago carried certain high officials from Broad Street to Jersey City, platform to platform, in 71 minutes; also of a special on the Jersey Central which about the same time ran three miles east from the snuff mills at Bound Brook in precisely 90 seconds, the time being taken by three stop watches on the locomotive.

Railroad racing as a sport is not encouraged by the companies, but on the Atlantic City Division, where the tracks run parallel for long distances through open country, Reading and Pennsylvania trains often run side by side.

BABY WANDERED 3 MILES.

And There Was a Neighborhood Scare in the Belief He Was Kidnapped.

There was a kidnapping scare in Brooklyn yesterday, when Ernest Newcomb, the two-and-a-half-year-old son of William D. Newcomb of 209 Marion Street, wandered three miles from his home, and was lost to his family for eight hours. Mrs. Newcomb intrusted Ernest to the care of his seven-year-old brother Willie, and let them out to play. Willie stopped to talk with his boy friends, and when he looked for Ernest the little fellow was nowhere in sight. He ran frantically down the street calling his little brother's name, but got no answer. Willie then went back to the house and tearfully told his mother what had happened.

Mrs. Newcomb hurried to the street and impressed some of her neighbors in the search. The whole neighborhood was gone over without trace being found of the missing child.

When the father returned from his work he went to the Ralph Avenue Police Station and reported Ernest's disappearance, and the police sent out an alarm of kidnapping.

CARNEGIE GIVES STEEL BONDS

Income of $2,000,000 of Them to Go to Maintaining Technical Schools.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 24.—Trustees of the Carnegie Institute announced to-day that $2,000,000 of Andrew Carnegie's gift of $3,500,000 recently made to the technical schools here, is in 5 per cent. gold interest bearing bonds of the United States Steel Corporation, which are said to have a market value of $2,300,000.

The earnings of these bonds are to be devoted to maintaining the enlarged schools, increasing the student body to 3,000.

MOTHER SEES YOUTH KILLED AT FOOTBALL

Young Lee's Skull Was Fractured as He Bucked Rival's Line in a Mass Play.

"I'M NOT HURT, FELLOWS"

Preparatory School Full Back Yelled Encouragement to His Fellows, but Then Suddenly Sank Senseless.

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, Conn., Nov. 24.—Before a large crowd in which were several of his relatives, Harry Lee, a 17-year-old student at the Gilbert Preparatory School, was killed in a football game here at noon to-day. His skull was fractured at the base of the brain and he died within 12 minutes.

The boy was the son of Mrs. Bessie Lee of 191 Main Street, whose home is directly opposite the field. She saw from her front window the play that caused her boy's death, and to-night she is prostrated.

The accident occurred in a game between an independent team on which were five Gilbert students and the Tierney cadets on Gilbert Field. The contest was preliminary to the big game between Winsted and Great Barrington, Mass. Lee was full back on his team, and had been doing most of the line bucking.

At the commencement of the third period, with the score 12 to 6 against the independents, Lee, after the first scrimmage, followed the kick-off, carried the ball to the cadets' 30-yard line, where he was downed, two or three players falling on top of him. In diving through the line in a mass play formation, which both teams had agreed to use, Lee lost his head gear and the back of his head struck a stone. Gaining his feet again he shouted to his team mates:

"Come on fellows, I'm not hurt."

Then he took his place behind the line. Before play started, however, he wavered and suddenly fell unconscious. He was carried into the clubhouse on the field, where his head was bathed in cold water, but he died before a doctor could be brought to him.

The game was stopped as soon as it became known that the boy had died, but later the big contest between Winsted and Great Barrington was fought on the same gridiron, Winsted winning 12 to 6.

CENTENARIAN DIES IN A FIRE.

Special to The New York Times.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 24.—Hubbard Blakeslee, who was 103 years old and supposed to be the oldest resident in Fairfield County, was burned to death in his barn at Southport this evening, and the authorities are looking for a stranger who had been helping Blakeslee for the last few days. He has not been seen since the fire.

LIGHTED BOMB IN TENEMENT.

A dynamite bomb with a burning fuse attached was found yesterday morning in the lower hallway of a four-story tenement occupied by sixteen Sicilian families at 226 East Ninety-seventh Street, by Salvatore Sizza, the janitor. It was lying outside the door leading from the hall to the grocery store of Salvatore Buccosusco, who lives on the floor above with his wife and six children.

The janitor was turning out the lights in the halls when he came across the bomb. A tiny jet of flame sputtered at the end of the fuse, and not knowing what it was he picked the bomb up. But it dawned upon him quickly that he held an infernal machine of some sort, and very tenderly he deposited it on the floor again and hurried to the street.

Outside he met Policeman Benjamin Fay of the East 104th Street Station. The policeman rushed into the hallway and stepped on the burning fuse. Then he carried the bomb to the station house and presented it to Lieut. O'Connor, who put it in a pail of water and notified the Bureau of Combustibles to come and take the thing away.

Buccosusco and all the other tenants in the building said they had never received any Black Hand threats.

BONFIRES BURN CHILDREN.

One Dead and Two Others Suffering in Hospitals.

Carelessness of children playing around bonfires resulted in the death of one and serious injury to two others in the Bronx yesterday.

Vincenzo Yaerso, a two-and-a-half-year-old baby, of 2,256 Morris Avenue, fell into a bonfire and was burned so severely that death resulted a few hours afterward at Fordham Hospital. The little fellow was picked up by Herca Ruerbo, seven years old, and some men passing beat out the flames. The mother arrived and carried the child away in her arms.

Louisa Legebauer, six years old, of 3,194 Third Avenue, stumbled and fell into a fire at 150th Street and Brook Avenue. She was taken to the Lebanon Hospital with her right arm and side burned.

Jacob Miller, five years old, of 1,451 Boston Road, met a similar accident at 177th Street and Boston Road and was treated at Fordham Hospital.

BIG FIRE AT HARLEM TRACK.

Twenty-five Stables Burned and Other Buildings Barely Saved.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Fire destroyed 400 stables at the Harlem race track to-day, causing a loss estimated at $75,000. Firemen experienced difficulty in saving the grand stands, betting ring, and other buildings on the grounds.

The buildings at Harlem were erected twenty-five years ago by John Condon, and were abandoned when racing in Illinois was killed six years ago.

McCurdy Enters Havana Race.

MOBILE, Ala., Nov. 24.—J. A. D. McCurdy, one of the aviators who is giving exhibitions of flying here this week, last night sent a cablegram to the Havana Post, Havana, Cuba, entering the contest for the $10,000 prize for a flight from Havana to Key West.

INTRUDER BROKE UP RALSTON'S DINNER

Found in Hallway of House on West Side, Stranger Said He Entered by Mistake.

HAD A SKELETON KEY

Gave His Name as Peterson and Tried to Act as if Drunk—Charged with Attempted Burglary.

While the family of Buckley Ralston of 106 West Eighty-fifth Street was seated at their Thanksgiving dinner in the dining room in the basement of their home last night Mr. Ralston's daughter suddenly announced:

"I'm sure I heard some one open the basement gate."

The rest told her she was mistaken, and the depredations on the bird of the hour continued. A minute later the girl said: "I'm sure I heard some one open the door this time."

Again her fears were laughed at, so the girl opened the dining room door and stepped into the hall.

There she saw a poorly dressed man, who hastily shoved a skeleton key into his pocket and began to act as if he were intoxicated. The child's cries brought her father and several other members of the family to the hall. They caught the intruder just as he was going up the steps to the parlor floor. Then one of them telephoned to Police Headquarters.

When Central Office detectives of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station reached the house the man was still insisting that he was drunk and that he had merely mistaken the house for his own. Nevertheless they took him on a charge of attempted burglary. He said he was August Peterson of 447 West Forty-first Street.

IN PAJAMAS CHASES BURGLAR

Bloomfield Resident Thinks He Shot a Man Who Tried to Enter His Home.

Special to The New York Times.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., Nov. 24.—Residents in the neighborhood of Washington Place were aroused early yesterday by pistol shots and saw a man fleeing along Washington Place to Washington Street, followed by another dressed only in his pajamas, who fired shots as he ran. The first man got away.

The pursuer was S. Sanders Neck of 25 Washington Place. A friend from England, who is staying with him, heard someone trying to open a window of the dining-room. He awoke Mr. Neck, and without waiting to dress, the latter seized his revolver and crept quietly downstairs. Just as he opened the front door a man ran across the lawn toward Washington Street.

Coroners Grove and Bower and County Prosecutor Crossley were telephoned for. They hurried to the scene and immediately began an investigation that continued all yesterday and is still going on to-night. The investigation had not been under way long before the suspicions of the law officers were directed against the negro Sears.

The negro was born on the Armstrong place thirty-three years ago, and his mother had been working for Mr. Armstrong a dozen years before that time. She is a genuine old Southern mammy and she worshipped Mr. Armstrong with all the fervor of her heart. He was her patron saint and her best friend. To-night the poor old negress, cringing with fear and grieving profoundly, is virtually a prisoner at Dutch Neck, where she is being watched by a representative of the County Prosecutor as a material witness in the case. She doesn't yet know that her son is locked up at Trenton on the charge of double murder.

Sears, when questioned by the county officials, said that he had gone to New Brunswick on Wednesday night to keep an engagement he had with a white man named Rudolph Norhouse. He had arranged to go rabbit hunting with Norhouse to-day. Although Sears is a negro, he is a member of the Second Regiment of Infantry of the New Jersey National Guard, and it was as a militiaman that he became acquainted with Norhouse.

Norhouse waited for Sears on Wednesday night, but as the negro was not punctual in keeping the appointment, which was for 8 o'clock, he did not meet him, and went to a show alone. Yesterday morning Norhouse appeared at Dutch Neck to keep his hunting appointment, and was questioned at length by Mr. Crossley and the Sheriff's men. He easily proved that he knew nothing whatever about the crime.

Sears admitted getting home about 12:45 in the morning, and being the first to discover the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong. It was considered strange that none of the doors or windows of the house had been tampered with, which showed that the murderer had gained access to the house with a key, and Sears is said to have a key to the house.

A search of the Armstrong house showed that the murderer, after killing the old minister and his wife, had gone to the clothes closet and searched the pockets of the clergyman's clothes. The old man never carried much money on his person, however, and if the murderer did get any it is believed to have been a very trifling sum.

The aged pastor wore his watch attached to a long gold chain that went around his neck. This is gone, and the police of New Brunswick and Trenton are bending every effort to-night to find it.

The bodies of the victims were not removed from the house, as would have been the case under a strict application of the law governing the holding of autopsies in New Jersey. At the earnest request of friends and of relatives the bodies will not be taken away until they are removed to the little church at Dutch Neck to-morrow morning, where the Rev. N. Thomas Brown, who succeeded Mr. Armstrong as active pastor of the church, will preach the funeral sermon, assisted by several of the best known Presbyterian ministers in New Jersey. The burial will be in the little Dutch Neck cemetery amid the graves of those whose funerals had been preached by Mr. Armstrong.

The news of the murder created much feeling at Princeton, where Mr. Armstrong was well known to every Princeton man, old and young. He was a familiar figure at old Nassau, and the appearance of the white-bearded old man of '52 at the athletic games was always the occasion of a great cheer from the undergraduates, and no sophomore was ever more loyal to all that Princeton means than was the venerable pastor.

The gun with which the Armstrongs are supposed to have been murdered is the property of Elmer Reed, a Dutch Neck farmer, who on Nov. 14 lent it to Sears. The weapon was found in the kitchen of the house and in each barrel was an empty shell, the charge of which had been recently fired. Another shotgun belonging to Mr. Armstrong was found in another room, but the condition of the barrel showed that it had not been fired in a long time.

Although the people of Dutch Neck and the surrounding country were greatly aroused over the double murder, no attempt was made by any one to do violence to Sears.

Mr. Armstrong was 70 years old when he married Miss Ann Rue, a relative of State Senator John D. Rue. Among the old preacher's best friends was the venerable ex-Chancellor William J. Magie of Elizabeth, a classmate of his at Princeton.

The Rev. Dr. Lewis C. Baker of Princeton was another college mate, and last night Dr. Baker referred to his old friend as one of the most devout and lovable characters in the Presbyterian Church, against whom no man could have possibly entertained a sentiment of hate.

Invitations are being sent to Presbyterian ministers throughout New Jersey to-night to attend the funeral at Dutch Neck to-morrow noon. The whole Princeton student body, it was said to-night, will probably go to Dutch Neck to pay their last tribute to the aged alumnus.

AUTO HITS A LITTLE GIRL.

F. A. M. Burrell Takes Her to the Hospital in Car That Hit Her.

While crossing Third Avenue at Eighty-sixth Street last night, in company with her sister, Ei-year-old Antoinette Nekits of 1,633 First Avenue was struck by an automobile owned by Fred A. M. Burrell of 1,409 Albemarle Road, Flatbush, and driven by Howard D. Bayha of 9 East Tenth Street, Brooklyn.

The chauffeur tried to avoid the girls, but his mud guard struck Antoinette Nekits and threw her to the street. Mr. Burrell, who was in the auto with a well-dressed woman, jumped out and picked up the girl and, with Patrolman Buckley of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station, hurried to the Presbyterian Hospital in the automobile.

Dr. Perry examined the girl and said she had some contusions and possible internal injuries and advised she be allowed to stay in the hospital over night. Mr. Burrell arranged that she should be given the best attention, and then went to the East Eighty-sixth Street Station with Buckley. He explained the matter to Lieut. Smith and no arrest was made.

Mr. Burrell and his companion were on their way to a wedding uptown.

Mr. Burrell is Vice President of Charles A. Schieren & Co., leather manufacturers, of 30 Ferry Street; a Trustee of the Brooklyn Savings Bank, and a Director of the Flatbush Trust Company.

CARRIAGE RUNS INTO AUTO.

Horse Was Unmanageable—Driver May Have His Skull Fractured.

As William Camp, a coachman of 306 West Fifty-fourth Street, was driving a brougham yesterday afternoon in Central Park, near Seventy-second Street, the horse became unmanageable and started off at a gallop. An auto belonging to Marvyn Scudder of 55 Wall Street was coming along and the horse ran directly in front of it.

A collision occurred and the carriage was overturned. Camp was thrown to the ground and probably had his skull fractured. Mounted Policeman Grossberger picked him up and he was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital.

The horse and brougham are the property of Edward W. Knapp, an agent, of 235 West Seventy-fifth Street. Mrs. Knapp when informed of the accident seemed surprised to hear that the horse and brougham were out of the stable.

DISAPPROVED BOYCOTT.

Gompers Denies That Federation Was Influenced by the Publishers.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 24.—President Samuel Gompers was called on to-day to defend a charge that the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor recently had been influenced by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. The controversy was precipitated in the convention as the result of a special committee report, upholding the action of the Executive Council in preventing a boycott on the San Francisco Call, which, a newspaper solicitor union desired some months ago to make effective.

Andrew J. Gallagher of the San Francisco Trades' and Labor Council demanded the newspaper solicitors. He said that the Federation Council, as the result of influence brought to bear by the publishers, had threatened to revoke the charter of the newly organized solicitors if they continued the boycott.

President Gompers denied that undue influence had been responsible for the action of the Federation Council. He explained that he had advised the action because the Solicitors' Union, being chartered by the Federation, had taken up the boycott without reference to the parent body and without reasonable excuse. The convention sustained him.

LAUD YARINI AS A PATRIOT.

HAVANA, Nov. 24.—Not since the funeral of Maximo Gomez, in 1905, has Havana seen such a tremendous demonstration of popular sympathy and respect as that which attended to-day the funeral of Alberto Yarini, the recognized leader of the Cuban white slave traders, who was slain Tuesday in a gun fight between rival gangs of Cuban and French slave traders.

Despite Yarini's notorious disrepute and his undisputed leadership in the white slave traffic in Cuba he had held the position of a popular idol, as Havana's exponent of anti-Americanism since his assault on J. Cornell Tarler, Chargé d'Affaires of the American Legation, in 1906.

The newspapers without exception laud Yarini as an illustrious Cuban patriot.

QUIET ALONG THE BORDER.

A Report That Disturbances Have Started on the West Coast.

LAREDO, Texas, Nov. 24.—Mexican Consul Diebold, with headquarters in this city, to-day received official advices which stated that quiet had been restored at all points save one throughout the country. The exception cited is what is known as the Guerrero district in the State of Chihuahua. In that section 200 revolutionists are still making attacks on small villages. The Consul asserts they are not revolutionists, but bandits, who are using the uprising as a pretext to rob and pillage.

Gen. Villar, stationed at Nuevo Laredo, to-day received official advices from all points embraced in his jurisdiction, extending from Matamoras to Colombia, 30 miles above Laredo, on the Mexican side of the river. He says everything is quiet along the border and in the immediate interior.

The Mexican Government still maintains a cordon of troops along the border. On the American side of the river troops are on guard from Brownsville to Del Rio, and according to information received this stretch of territory has been quiet all day.

If the whereabouts of Francisco Madero is known, no intimation is given out by the Mexican authorities.

Notwithstanding the improved conditions, alarmist rumors are still in circulation. These are not confined to the border towns, but are current in Mexico City. A rumor there to-day which was reported to the Minister of War was to the effect that an attack would be made upon Matamoras to-day or to-night. This was communicated to Gen. Villar, who immediately got in touch with his aids in Matamoras.

After thorough scouting of the country a reply was sent to Gen. Villar that there was no indication of any outbreak either at Matamoras or in the vicinity. Up to a late hour to-night the wires were working without interruption.

Gen. Trevino, who left Monterey yesterday with a trainload of soldiers for Torreon over the Mexican International Railroad, had not arrived at Torreon at a late hour to-night. The authorities say he has probably left the train and is marching with the troops overland to some point in the Guerrero district.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 24.—While it is admitted that with the tightening of the censorship established by the Mexican Government only such information as is favorable to the Government is being allowed to come through, it is the general belief that the situation is now pretty well under control.

Sympathizers of the revolutionists here, however, assert that the present lull merely marks the strengthening of the insurgent organization, and that the real force of the uprising will be felt within a few days.

The most important development is the report that disturbances have started in the territory of Tepic, on the west coast. This is a new field, no disturbances having previously been reported from any point in that section of the country. A heavy force of troops has been sent to Tepic from Mexico City.

THINKS SITUATION BETTER.

Ambassador to Mexico Sends News to State Department.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—It is the opinion of Henry Lane Wilson, United States Ambassador at Mexico City, that the situation in the republic is improving. The State Department had a dispatch from Mr. Wilson to-day based on information furnished by the Mexican Foreign Office.

Mr. Wilson was informed that fighting continued at Parral and Ciudad Guerrero, where the revolutionists already had lost fourteen men and the Government four. The remainder of the republic was reported to be quiet.

Gen. Hoyt, commanding the Department of Texas, telegraphed to the War Department to-day that conditions on the American side of the border were quiet. Yesterday the War Department offered to supply Gen. Hoyt with reinforcements, to be drawn from the Department of the Colorado, if he wished them. Apparently the troops at present on the Rio Grande are regarded as sufficient in number to prevent armed parties from crossing the river into Mexico, as Gen. Hoyt has made no application for more troops.

MADERO'S MANIFESTO.

Why Self-Appointed "Provisional President" Would Depose Diaz.

A manifesto to the nation, credited to and signed by Francisco I. Madero, calling on the people of Mexico to rise against the government of Gen. Diaz, was made public here last night by friends of Madero, who stated that it had been received in this city yesterday. The manifesto is dated at San Luis Potosi, Mexico, Oct. 5, 1910, and a footnote states that it is for private circulation up to Nov. 15, and that thereafter it is to be circulated broadcast.

The manifesto recites that a feeling of unrest has pervaded the republic because of the Diaz system of government and has increased because of the efforts of Gen. Diaz to saddle on the nation a successor of his own choice.

"This unlawful and ruthless situation can no longer subsist," the manifesto states. "I have thoroughly comprehended that if the people have designated me as a candidate for the Presidency it is not because they have discovered in me the gifts of a statesman or ruler, but the manliness of a patriot, determined, if necessary, to sacrifice himself, provided liberty can be achieved.

"In virtue of the above and as an echo of the national will I declare herewith the past elections to be illegal and the republic to be without lawful government, and I assume provisionally the Presidency of the republic until the people will designate its rulers in conformity with the law. To attain this end it is necessary to remove from power the audacious usurpers that, as sole title of legality, display scandalous and immoral frauds."

The manifesto designates Sunday, Nov. 20, from 6 o'clock on, as the date and time for the rising according to the following plan:

The elections held in June and July of the current year are hereby declared null and void.

In order to avoid as far as possible the troubles resulting from all revolutionary commotions, the laws promulgated by the actual Government are declared to be in force until they may be reformed through constitutional methods. Under any circumstances the obligations incurred toward foreign Governments by the porfiristic administration previous to the 20th of the coming month shall be duly respected.

In addition to the Constitution and laws in force, the principle of non-re-election of the President and Vice President of the republic, of the Governors of the States and Municipal Presidents is declared to be supreme law of the republic.

I assume the character of Provisional President of the United States of Mexico with the power and requisite faculties of making war on the usurpatory Government of Gen. Diaz. As soon as the capital of the republic and more than one-half of the States of the federation shall be in the power of the forces of the people, the Provisional President will convocate extraordinary general elections to be held one month later, and he will turn over his powers to the President-elect as soon as the result of the elections shall be known.

Before retiring the Provisional President will render account to Congress of the use made by him of the powers conferred by this present plan.

On Nov. 20, from 6 o'clock on, all the citizens of the Republic will take up arms to thrust from power the authorities governing it now.

In case the authorities offer armed resistance they shall be compelled, by force of arms, to respect the popular will, but the laws of war shall be rigorously observed in such cases. Attention is also called of every Mexican to the duty to respect persons as well as property of foreigners.

Such authorities as may resist the carrying out of this plan will be imprisoned in order to be judged by the courts of the Republic after the close of the revolution. One of the first acts of the Provisional Government shall be to set at liberty all political prisoners.

The appointment of a Governor provisional of every State occupied by the revolutionary forces shall be made by the Provisional President.

The new authorities shall dispose of all monies found in the public offices in order to provide for the ordinary expenses of the Administration and for the cost of war, keeping account with the greatest scrupulosity. When such funds are not sufficient for military outlays, voluntary or forced loans shall be resorted to, but the latter only from citizens or from national institutions.

"The most severe punishment," the manifesto declares; "will be applied to soldiers who sack a settlement or who kill defenseless prisoners. In case the troops and authorities supporting Gen. Diaz should execute the prisoners of war the same shall not be done in reprisals with those that may fall into our hands, but the civil or military authorities who shall have ordered, disposed, or transmitted in any form an order to shoot any prisoners from our side shall, within twenty-four hours and after a summary process, be executed by being shot. Not the highest functionaries are to be exempt from such punishment except Gen. Diaz and his Ministers, who will, in case they ordered or permitted such executions, be punished likewise, but only after they have been sentenced by the courts of the republic once the revolution is accomplished.

"In case Gen. Diaz shall dispose that the customs of war be respected his life shall be spared, but in any case he shall give account to the courts of the manner in which he has managed the funds of the people and how he has complied with the laws."

The manifesto states that as it will be difficult to provide the numerous forces of the people with uniforms, volunteers or militia will carry on their headdress or on their arm the tri-colored ribbon.

In a concluding appeal addressed to fellow-citizens the manifesto says: "Do not vacillate for an instant, but take up arms and cast off the usurpers."

GEN. REYES STILL IN PARIS

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Gen. Bernardo Reyes, the Mexican soldier who came to Paris some time ago on a military mission for the Mexican Government, denied to-day the report that he intends to return to Mexico to take a hand in the revolution.

To a representative of The Associated Press Gen. Reyes expressed the opinion that President Diaz, whom he described as a great patriot, would succeed in restoring order and afterward adopt effective measures for allaying the present popular discontent in Mexico. Gen. Reyes declined to go into details regarding the causes which led up to the present condition of affairs in his country, but expressed the belief that the unrest could not be considered as serious and would not last long.

Of Francisco Madero, the leader of the revolutionists in Mexico, Gen. Reyes said: "Madero lacks experience. He has had no public career which would make him formidable. Should some man with greater prestige and a popular following, and especially a man of influence with the army, appear behind him, the situation might possibly become grave."

Gen. Reyes said the present trouble in Mexico would not alter his plans. He expected to remain here long enough to complete the mission with which he is charged. Pointing to a document on his desk, he said:

"The most important matter with which I have to deal has just come before me. Reports that I intend to intervene in the trouble are baseless. I left Mexico a year ago for the express purpose of preventing my name being used as a slogan for revolution."

José Limantour, the Mexican Minister of Finance, is also in Paris, having arrived here several months ago with his wife, who is under treatment for a long-standing ailment.

Dr. Limatour declared that the situation in Mexico is in no sense serious. Local agitations, he said to-day, had been magnified by Texas frontier reports into a general revolutionary movement. Madero, he said, who was a wealthy son of an ex-Governor of the State of Coahuila, was a well meaning but deluded Socialistic doctrinaire, who imagined that he was inspired by the spirit of Benito Juarez to regenerate the Mexican democracy.

"Madero spent his fortune lavishly in Socialistic propaganda in industrial centres," said Dr. Limantour. "Hence the present agitation at Puebla and Orizaba, where many refugee Anarchists from Barcelona, Spain, are living.

Reports to Mexican banks and commercial houses here agree that the disturbances in Mexico are of an insignificant character, and that order has been restored.

"The attitude of the United States as regards neutrality along the frontier is perfectly correct," say the reports reaching Mexican representatives in Paris.

ALL QUIET AT TORREON.

Excitement Subsiding and Business Has Been Resumed.

TORREON, State of Durango, Mexico, Nov. 24.—All is quiet here and at Gomez Palacio, a few miles to the north. Not a shot has been fired here, and reports that the town had surrendered to the revolutionists are baseless.

The only fighting in this vicinity was at Gomez Palacio last Monday, when the rural police put to rout a band of looting rebels. In the engagement seven rebels and six defenders of the town were killed.

A report that 300 revolutionists are within a few miles of Torreon has not been confirmed.

Five hundred Mexican troops are in the vicinity, and further trouble is not expected.

There is no trouble in the States of Durango, Zacatecas, Sinaloa, and Aguas Calientes. The excitement caused by the outbreak is sub

HORSEMAN'S FEATS DELIGHT COMMUTERS

WAS TRICK CAVALRY RIDER

In His First Enlistment Warwick Was the Champion Bareback Rope-Skipper of the Army.

Staten Islanders who cross the bay in the municipal ferryboats have been interested for a week past in the performances of a Governor's Island equestrian, who about noon each day, appears along the seawall, on the newly-made western edge of the island. He rides a big black horse and performs tricks in horsemanship that would delight the heart of a Wild West Show performer.

The commuters have been wondering who the rider was, for most of them know that the soldiers at Fort Jay are infantrymen, and horsemanship of the kind they have seen is, as a rule, unknown among foot soldiers. Many of them have guessed that the horseman is a cavalry officer attached to the Headquarters of the Department of the East, others that he is a field artilleryman on detached service, or perhaps an infantry soldier, who has seen previous service in the saddle. The last theory is correct.

John Warwick, private Company L, Twenty-ninth United States Infantry, is the horseman. He was formerly a trooper of Troop A, Second United States Cavalry, with which command he served his first enlistment. When he enlisted the second time, to the surprise of his fellow troopers, he asked to be assigned to the infantry. It was one of those puzzles that enlisted men have a way of providing for their superiors.

Warwick was one of the trick riders of the famous old Second Cavalry and no exhibition of horsemanship by that corps was complete without his having a prominent place in it. As a standing bareback rider his fame extended through the cavalry arm of the service. None could stand on the back of a horse more steadily than he, and the faster the horse went the greater did his skill appear to be. He could stand on his hands, he was one of a dozen troopers to figure in the regiment's pyramid performance, and he was the champion bareback rope skipper of the service.

When the Twenty-ninth came to Governors Island the ex-cavalryman was assigned to the regiment. He does not deny that he missed his mount from the first day. "Boots and saddles" rang in his memory day and night, but he made a good infantryman for all that—his officers say one of the best in the command. Warwick when off duty was in the habit of visiting the Quartermaster's stables, and in due time asked leave to exercise a fine black charger named Bob. The permission was given, and so it was that the Governors Island Horse Show was inaugurated about a week ago.

The course used by Warwick is about half a mile long. He will make the whole distance standing on the bare back of the horse, all the time as steady as a rock, though he sometimes balances on one foot, and old Bob is trotting at his best gait. Warwick kneels, then he swings around and rides backward, next he stands on his hands, and runs through trick after trick with the precision of the well-trained circus performer.

EXPECT SMITH'S ELECTION.

Davis to Return to Aid His Fight for Jersey Senatorship.

It was reported around the City Hall in Jersey City yesterday that Robert Davis, Democratic boss of Hudson County, had come out of the sanitarium in New York to which he went for treatment two or three weeks ago, to help ex-Senator James Smith in his fight for the Senate before the caucus. The feeling among politicians is that those of the Hudson County Assemblymen who have declared that the party ought to stand by James E. Martine because of his vote in the primary will, all but one, be whipped into line. The eleven Essex Assemblymen publicly pledged to him and the thirteen Hudson votes will give ex-Senator Smith 24 out of 26 votes needed to make a majority in the Senatorial caucus. Those who know the situation say there is no doubt that ex-Senator Smith can have the caucus nomination for the asking.

How much good that will do him in the fight is still an unsettled question. Enough have declared against him to destroy the Democratic majority in joint meeting. They may, however, conclude, if Mr. Smith is made the nominee, that they will be rated as bolters if they refuse to obey the caucus command, and will join the Smith procession reluctantly.

Rumors that their revolt will be made ineffective by Republican help become more and more persistent every day. Such things have happened in New Jersey before. When John R. McPherson's reelection to the United States Senate was menaced some years ago by a bolt of five Assemblymen from the Democratic caucus which had nominated him, the Republican caucus served notice on the bolters that unless they fell in line the Republicans would help him out.

There is a strong current of belief that Mr. Martine cannot be elected. He has none of the political backing that has heretofore made United States Senators, and the forces arrayed against him are very powerful in producing results in State politics. In the new Legislature, however, there will be ten members who, in 1907, voted for the passage of the popular referendum bill. There will also be Senators Cornish of Warren, Democrat, and Prince, Republican, of Passaic, who were not recorded on it. The ten were Assemblymen Backus of Mercer and Lewis of Burlington. The other eight are Senators Sitzer of Middlesex and Price of Sussex, both Democrats; and these Republicans: Senators Morley of Camden, Hand of Cape May, Brown of Monmouth, Plummer of Salem, Freylinghuysen of Somerset, Ackerman of Union. The bill was passed in the last hours of the session of 1907, after a conference committee had been named by the two houses to frame it. It had 18 votes in the Senate and 33 votes in the Assembly.

TO PUSH LINCOLN MEMORIAL.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Senator Cullom of Illinois has just announced that he will pursue his plan for a fitting National memorial to Lincoln immediately upon the reassembling of Congress next month.

The Senator says he wants to round out his long public career with this achievement, and he hopes the country at large will respond to the sentiment in favor of a great National appropriation for the purpose.

It is the plan of Senators Cullom, Root, and others to ask Congress for an appropriation of $2,000,000, $3,000,000, or even $4,000,000 for the memorial. It may be a boulevard, a monument, or a memorial hall.

SEEK SECOND MAN IN TRUNK MURDER

Police Want to Question Henri d'Anarc, a Compatriot of Callier.

HE ALSO DISAPPEARED

Murdered Artist Got $10,000 from a Brother Just Before He Was Sealed in the Trunk.

A new twist was given by the police yesterday to the Callier-Lewis murder case by the bringing in of an entirely new name. It is that of Henri d'Anarc, a French compatriot of Albert C. Callier, the artist and painter on china, whose body was found last Thursday in the trunk that was left at the home of Philip Meagher in West Forty-seventh Street in 1902 by William Lewis, a sometime waiter, who has not been seen for the last three or four years.

Callier, d'Anarc, and Lewis, the police have discovered, were bosom companions for three or four years previous to 1902 and at one time in 1897 the three worked for a decorator on china named Alexander McCrea, who had a studio at 7 Patchin Place. Lewis was a man of all work there, and Callier and d'Anarc worked at their trade of china decorating. The three frequented the home of Mrs. Julia Alexander in West Sixty-third Street, where Lewis bourded, and here the murder is thought to have been committed.

The bringing in of a third man in the case serves to explain many puzzling circumstances, particularly the letter Lewis received on the eve of his marriage to Miss Jennie Enright, the nurse, in 1905, while he was living in Harlem, which made him suddenly disappear and also the telegram which Meagher told the police Lewis received when he suddenly took leave of the former, saying that he was going to take a place as waiter at the Manhattan Beach Hotel.

For days the police tried to find out from whom the telegram and letter were received. If a third man knew the secret of the trunk, the police argued, it would explain the sudden fear that seized upon Lewis made him forego his marriage plans after he had completed all arrangements, even to the engaging of the priest and the baking of the marriage cake.

On d'Anarc's Trail.

A few days after the murder, and when the identity of Callier and Lewis had been established, detectives got on the trail of d'Anarc. They found traces of him in the haunts of Callier and Lewis and learned that he had been seen with both about the time the murder was committed, in the Summer of 1902.

Since learning of his existence detectives have been searching through the French and Norman restaurants and boarding houses of the city, but all they have been able to discover is that he disappeared in the Winter of 1902 and was not seen in New York again until 1905, or about the time Lewis's marriage to Miss Enright was to take place. Since then he has been lost sight of entirely.

The presence of d'Anarc in the city so close to the time of Lewis's wedding is considered by the police to be especially significant as he could easily have been the man who sent the disturbing letter and telegram. His motive in sending them, they contend would necessarily establish his connection with the disappearance of Callier.

Although Deputy Police Commissioner Flynn's detectives are giving out less information regarding this murder than any that has been committed in this city in years and kept the existence of d'Anarc's connection with the case secret, the fact that they have been on his trail for several days was learned when reporters visited several French restaurants yesterday afternoon.

Callier was born in Normandy and went to Paris when a young man to study art. He had a brother named Rene, and they were associated in an ivory company in Sierra Leone on the west coast of Africa. The brothers rad a dispute, when Albert left, but remittances kept coming from Rene even when Albert came to New York, so that he was not dependent upon his art.

In June, 1902, he received about $10,000 from his brother and showed the draft to friends in the city. At that time Lewis, whom he had met a few years previously, was boarding with Mrs. Alexander at 140 West Sixty-third Street, and Callier and d'Anarc visited him frequently. Mrs. Alexander and two other families in the same house went to a seaside resort during June and July, 1902, leaving Lewis in sole possession of the house. Lewis, Callier, and d'Anarc has a joyous time on the money which Callier received from his brother and spent a good deal of it.

Callier Had $10,000.

Callier suddenly disappeared about a week after receiving the money, and when Mrs. Alexander returned Lewis informed her that he had returned to France. He also told others the same tale. D'Anare also disappeared, and the police believe he returned to his home in Normandy.

Lewis changed his manner of life and went to live in Harlem in 1904, where he became connected with the John J. Dooley Democratic Association and helped Dooley in the fight he was waging to wrest control of the district from John F. McAvoy. Through Michael O'Connor, Secretary of the association, Lewis met Miss Enright. Lewis apparently determined to turn over a new leaf, for he was a constant attendant at both St. Joseph's and All Saint's Roman Catholic Churches in Harlem and was making money as a salesman for the glassware firm of Edward Rorke & Co., at 40 Barclay Street. He never referred to his past, particularly to his fiancée, and kept dark as much as possible the fact that he had once been a waiter. He made many friends in Harlem, had plenty of money, and dressed well.

The Saturday before he was to be married in January, 1905, he accompanied Miss Enright to All Saints' Church, where both confessed to the priest and attended communion next day. The next day when Lewis had arranged to have the ceremony performed at St. Joseph's Church he sent Peter Talty, a friend of O'Connor, a hasty note saying his wedding had been indefinitely postponed, and left the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cloudsley at 244 West 124th Street, where he had been living for nearly two years.

As he was preparing to leave the house to get married, Cloudsley told the police, Lewis received a letter which greatly upset him. He looked so badly that Mrs. Cloudsley gave him a cup of tea. Lewis refused to tell what the letter contained, and, sending his trunks to Miss Enright, he left the house and never returned.

In July, 1905, he appeared one day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Meagher, who had moved to Fifty-fourth Street, taking the trunk which contained the skeleton of Callier, hermetically sealed inside, with them. They allowed Lewis to sleep a few nights on a cot in the kitchen.

Lewis seldom left the house and seemed to be hiding from some one. One day he received a telegram. He said it came from a friend whom he was to meet at Twenty-third Street and Sixth Avenue, and get a place as a waiter. That was the last the Meaghers saw of him. The police say both the letter and the telegram came from d'Anarc, who had returned to New York and found Lewis in Harlem.

Known in Restaurants.

Although detectives searched through all the French restaurants in the city, all they could learn was that d'Anarc had been seen there with Callier and a man answering the description of Lewis in 1902. He was not seen at any of the places when he returned here in 1905. One of the restaurants which the detectives visited was that of M. Chevalier, at 202 West Thirty-ninth Street. Chevalier said he had not seen d'Anarc, but that he had known the family of Callier in Normandy as well as in Sierra Leone. Mme. Landes of 143 West Forty-seventh Street also remembered Callier, but she did not recall d'Anarc.

A clue regarding d'Anarc was furnished by Thomas G. Tryor, a waiter of 306 Third Avenue, who knew Lewis well. He said he often heard Lewis mention both Callier and d'Anarc and that Lewis had told him on several occasions that the three had had many celebrations in Lewis's apartments in Sixty-third Street. D'Anarc is described as being a young man of French appearance, with black hair and mustache, speaking good English.

The officials of the Bloomingdale Insane Asylum at White Plains laughed yesterday over a report that Lewis was employed until recently at the asylum.

"Why, sure," said one of them yesterday, "Lewis was employed here, but he is only a boy of 19 or 20, and as he is only about 5 feet 2 inches tall I am afraid he cannot be made to fit the missing link in the trunk murder. He left the asylum a month ago. If I had only known about this murder at the time I would have made an effort to detain him, so that the newspapers could have him photographed and written up. But you see I didn't know what was to happen, so I let him go without taking his address. This, however, will be a lesson to me in the future."

DISTRICT MESSENGER UNION.

A. D. T. Boy Strikers Scatter When Police Invade Their Meeting.

Up to last evening the strike of the district messengers had not been taken up seriously by the Postal boys, only thirty of whom quit. It was confined practically to the American District Telegraph messengers. The latter were not sanguine about the Postal boys quitting. They admitted that the Postal messengers were better paid than they were, and were satisfied with their conditions.

The leaders of the strike asserted that 100 of the Postal boys volunteered to act as strike pickets, but Postal boys who were seen told conflicting stories about it. The strikers organized a number of parades in different parts of the city and cheered when they passed any of the American District Telegraph offices. They held meetings in their basement headquarters at 3 State Street, where they listened to talk from Socialist speakers who have taken them up. A Socialist paper got out a special edition for them, the proceeds of the sale of which is to go to the aid of the strikers.

Daniel Skelton, superintendent of the American District Telegraph messenger department at 6 Dey Street, said he was not worrying over the strike. The boys would probably have some worrying to do on payday, he said, as many of them helped to support their families, and would have to do some explaining to their mothers.

The strikers formed a union yesterday, and will apply for a charter from the American Federation of Labor. They haven't given it a name yet.

Just as a meeting of the A. D. T. messenger boys, at 42 South Street, last night, which was attended by a large contingent of the Postal boys, had decided on demands to be made on behalf of the latter and enforced by a strike, a policeman, with several detectives, entered and the meeting broke up in a hurry. The policeman had previously been told to leave the hall and did so, returning in a minute or two with the detectives.

Nathan Hoffman, the strike leader, presided at the meeting, and the following demands were agreed on to be submitted to Manager Hennessey of the Postal messenger service and Supt. Leonard of the Postal Telegraph Company to-day, a strike to be declared if they are refused:

Five dollars a week instead of $3.60; pay for work on every other Sunday; the boys to pay 25 cents instead of 50 cents a week for uniforms; an eight-hour work day; the fining system to be abolished; no messenger to be discriminated against for activity in union matters; $2 a week increase of pay for Sergeants.

MISS LENEVE ON WAY HERE?

Woman Closely Resembling Her Boards the Majestic at Queenstown.

QUEENSTOWN, Nov. 24.—A young woman who closely resembled Ethel Clare Leneve went on board the Majestic when the vessel touched here on her way to New York to-day. When questioned she emphatically denied this identification.

The passenger arrived here on the mail train from London. She purchased a second-class ticket in the London office of the steamship company. Yesterday morning the White Star officials received a telephone message from an unnamed inquirer asking whether it would be possible to catch the Majestic at Queenstown. The steamship men comment on the unusual occurrence of a second-cabin passenger traveling from London to Queenstown to board the liner.

Those in close touch with Miss Leneve say she is still in England, remaining in seclusion in order to avoid annoyance due to the unpleasant notoriety which she has obtained.

SUFFRAGETTES GO TO JAIL.

None of Those Arrested in London Accepts the Option of a Fine.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—All the suffragettes who were charged with assault and willful damage to property as a result of their rioting of the past two days were found guilty in the Bow Street Police Court today and were sentenced to pay fines of $10 or $25 or to spend two weeks or a month in jail, according to the seriousness of their offenses.

All the prisoners elected to go to jail.

Special to The New York Times.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 24.—"Mike," a trained mule, was led before a Thanksgiving audience in a local theatre this afternoon and told to "Go." He went with both heels at the scenery. Wings, set pieces, and drops were reduced to ribbons and splinters before he could be stopped.

But while consternation reigned on the stage the audience applauded loudly, thinking "Mike's" act a part of the regular performance. After "Mike" had been hobbled the curtain was run down and the audience was dismissed.

"Mike" was missing when to-night's bill was put on at the theatre. He is being kept in a stable which is hoof proof.

Their Arraignment Will Raise Number Indicted in Queens to 22.

Four more arraignments are expected this morning of residents of Queens who have been indicted for grafting. Their names have not yet been published, but they are understood to be men who appeared on the payrolls as owners of "tin horses and carts," which drew pay from the city for services that were never rendered.

These indictments will raise the number of individuals accused of graft in Queens to twenty-two. The Grand Jury has been continued to Dec. 20, and it is expected that another batch of indictments will be forthcoming.

DREXEL GOES ASTRAY IN HIS MONOPLANE

Aviator Trying to Return to Point Breeze Track Flew in the Opposite Direction.

CHOSE THE WRONG RIVER

Thought He Was Following Schuylkill, but It Was the Delaware—Descends Near Trenton After 70-Minute Flight.

For the second time in this country an aviator lost his way in the air yesterday in attempting a continuous cross-country flight toward a previously selected destination. J. Armstrong Drexel, the American, who flies a Bleriot machine, and who winged his way upward for a world's altitude record on Wednesday, attempted to fly from Orleans Station, near Philadelphia, where he alighted from his record-breaking flight above the clouds to the Point Breeze race track, where he was due to continue his exhibition flights.

At Point Breeze word had been received that Drexel was coming by air from Orleans, and a sharp lookout was kept for him. But the airman failed to appear.

Instead, he soared through the air for an hour and ten minutes, flew four miles further than he should have gone to gain his destination, and finally becoming bewildered, landed on the farm of Peter Roebling, son of the Brooklyn Bridge builder, north of Trenton, N. J.

Flew Away from His Destination.

The airman, inquiring as to his whereabouts, found that he was further from Point Breeze than when he first started out on his aerial cruise and he decided to seek Point Breeze by train, leaving his monoplane in the care of Mr. Roebling, who put it in his barn.

Mr. Drexel learned on coming to earth that he had mistaken the Delaware River for the Schuylkill from his monoplane seat 1,000 feet aloft, and trailed along above it instead of the waterway which would have led him back to the exhibition grounds.

The other cross-country flight in which an airman lost his way was that of Charles K. Hamilton in his effort to return to Governors Island from Philadelphia after making a successful outward-bound flight under the auspices of THE NEW YORK TIMES. Hamilton mistook the Lehigh Valley Railroad tracks for the Baltimore & Ohio tracks, and was forced to land near South Amboy when he expected he was nearing his aeroplane shed on the military reservation at Governors Island.

In Mr. Drexel's experience he encountered no trouble more serious than the loss of his hat, which was blown off by a sudden cross wind when he had been half an hour in the air. He made his landing in perfect form and did not damage either himself or his machine in the least.

The experience, when word of it was sent back to Point Breeze, caused Mr. Drexel to be the most talked-of airman of the day, just as his record-breaking flight of Saturday had made him the hero of that hour as well. Claude Grahame-White, who had entertained the crowd by taking Gen. James Allen, Chief Signal Officer of the United States Army, for an aerial spin above the Philadelphia Navy Yard, flew up the Schuylkill to meet Drexel on the receipt of a rumor that he was nearing Philadelphia. Drexel's airline route from Orleans to Point Breeze, had he followed it, would have carried him over a distance of thirteen miles.

In his seventy minutes of flying, however, he made an air-line distance of only twenty miles and landed finally when his gasoline and patience were both at the point of exhaustion. The odd point of the airman's mistake was that in following the Delaware he flew almost directly north, while the Schuylkill, which he intended to follow, would have led him almost due south.

"I found myself over a river," said Mr. Drexel to the eager crowd that surrounded his air craft on the Roebling farm, "and I started as I thought down it." He was informed he had landed on the banks of the Delaware, and had been flying further away from his destination instead of toward it. At this he laughed heartily.

"I was lost before I made my landing," he said, "and hoped I could find myself again. But my gasoline was giving out, and I decided not to try. I sighted this good-looking landing ground and decided to try for it."

Found Safe Landing Place.

Mr. Drexel was informed that Hamilton, when he lost his way, came down on what he thought was a nice green lawn, and found it actually a green skum over a swamp. When he was congratulated on having better luck, the airman said that he had seen chickens running about from his perch aloft, and knew he could land safely.

One of the first persons to reach Mr. Drexel's side as he descended was H. G. Stoddard, President of the Trenton Iron Company, who was passing in an automobile.

"Why, I though you came from an old Philadelphia family," Mr. Stoddard suggested. "How did a Pennsylvanian ever lose his way and get across the Jersey line?"

"That's just how I knew I was lost," was the airman's retort. "I knew mighty well this was Jersey country and not Pennsylvania."

Mr. Drexel accepted Mr. Stoddard's invitation to join him in an automobile ride to the Trenton Junction Railroad Station, and also accepted a hat from Mr. Stoddard, which was pulled out from an emergency basket carried under the automobile's forward seat.

On boarding a train for Philadelphia Mr. Drexel said he would not attempt again to fly his machine back to Point Breeze, but would send mechanics for it to-morrow, with instructions to dismantle it, and send it home by rail.

As Mr. Drexel's machine carried no barograph, his altitude could not be ascertained. As he passed over Trenton he seemed to be some 2,000 feet in the air and the whirring of his propeller could be heard only as a slight humming. He attracted much attention, although no one knew who was the pilot of the strange craft which had come suddenly among them.

Flights by Grahame-White.

At the Point Breeze grounds Claude Grahame-White gave several exhibition flights before several thousand persons who had come to see Mr. Drexel's return. Mr. Grahame-White's long flight up the river to meet him gave thousands of persons in South Philadelphia a thrill, as he was plainly visible against the gray dull clouds atop the river.

Those on the grounds were equally thrilled by Gen. Allen's ten-minute flight, in which he seemed so much at ease in the monoplane that he was carried away from the grounds to a point above the navy yard. Gen. Allen said on alighting that he thoroughly enjoyed the experience of being an airman, and that he hoped to see the army well equipped with aeroplanes within another season.

UNITED IN THEIR AFFLICTION.

Young Couple, Both Blind, Married in Brooklyn.

The little commonplace that love is blind became a romantic reality yesterday afternoon, when William M. Gooshaw of 322 Tompkins Avenue, Brooklyn, and Miss Beryl H. Clarke of 122 Sterling Place, both of whom are blind, were married at the home of the bride's uncle, Joseph Lejeune, at 387 Seventh Street, Brooklyn.

Mr. Gooshaw, who is 26 years old, lost his sight ten years ago, when he was kicked in the head by a runaway horse. Miss Clarke was stricken with blindness when she was 5 years old, following a long illness. In recent years she has been attached to the Pacific Branch of the Brooklyn Public Library, at Fourth Avenue and Pacific Street, as Superintendent of the Blind Department. Mr. Gooshaw was employed at the Industrial Home for the Blind, at Gates Avenue and Tompkins Avenue.

About two years ago Mr. Gooshaw, who, owing to the lateness of his own blindness, had never learned to read embossed print, decided to visit the Blind Department of the Pacific Street Branch of the library in order to learn there where he might acquire a reading knowledge of embossed print. There he met and spoke to Miss Clarke, and although such instruction was not in her line of work at the library, she presently volunteered to teach Gooshaw herself. Each week thereafter he repaired to the library for several hours, and under Miss Clarke's instruction soon mastered reading of the small embossed points in the books for the blind.

This enabled him to advance rapidly in the institution where he was employed, and a few months ago he was promoted to the highest place there, becoming its Superintendent.

The lessons, begun in the blind department of the library two years ago, reached their climax yesterday afternoon, when the Rev. A. B. Slocum of the Greenwood Baptist Church, at Seventh Avenue and Sixth Street, Brooklyn married the couple. James Brock, Jr., was best man, and Miss Myrtle Hart bridesmaid. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Gooshaw went for a honeymoon trip to the Adirondacks. They will live at the home of the bride's parents on their return.

GLAD DEMOCRATS WON.

Former Sugar Trust Lawyer Hopes for a Downward Tariff Now.

John E. Parsons, the lawyer, who, until recently was counsel for the Sugar Trust, and Mrs. Parsons returned last night on the Cunard liner Mauretania. They have been abroad since September. Mr. Parsons said that he was greatly pleased with the late Democratic victory.

"The Democratic Party is now in a splendid position to do something for the country," he said. "I hope it will take advantage of the opportunity and give economy of administration, recognition of the rights of the State as against Federal usurpation, sound money and tariff revision.

"There ought to be a proper downward revision of the tariff carried out on business lines, not only on food stuffs, but on all kinds of manufactures. By this I do not mean that the tariff should be lowered so that our manufacturers could be swamped by cheap foreign competition.

"I am a Democrat, but I have had at times to vote the Republican ticket for political reasons. Who is going to be sent to represent the State of New York in the Senate Do they talk of Osborne or Shepard? I hope it is the latter, because I think he will make a very good Senator for this State."

Mr. and Mrs. Parsons spent most of their time on the other side in Paris.

GOBBLER LOST HIS BARK.

Special to The New York Times.

LIVINGSTON, N. J., Nov. 21.—"Jerry," a turkey gobbler owned by Jerome Smith of this town, lost his head because he was so unfortunate as to lose his voice a few days before Thanksgiving. Jerry was noted in the countryside hereabout as the turkey that mimicked the bark of a dog. Instead of gobbling like any well-regulated king of the turkey yard, Jerry made a noise like a zealous watchdog when he essayed to raise his voice.

This peculiar characteristic of the bird has been its salvation for three successive years. Other turkeys in the Smith barnyard succumbed to the inevitable axe at the approach of Thanksgiving and Christmas, but Jerry escaped because his owner found the turkey's voice a more valuable asset than his weight in holiday meat.

By reason of his peculiar vocal powers Jerry served as a guardian of the poultry yard, and on one occasion proved the defender of the farm house itself. Marauding tramps, in search of material for their commissary, fled in terror when, upon invading the Smith premises, they were greeted by a noise that resembled the growls of a pugnacious bulldog.

The turkey's fame spread and Smith even received offers for Jerry from ambitious farmers, who thought that by crossing the breed with the guinea fowl they might produce a biped with a clarion bark that would be musical as well as effective. One day last week, however, Jerry suddenly became mute. His remarkable voice disappeared, the farmer believed, because of some affection of the vocal chords, and, like the passé tenor, Jerry went into oblivion with it, for yesterday his head was lopped off to make a Jersey holiday.

ALMOST KILLS BRIDEGROOM.

Bettis, Robber's Victim, Was to Have Been Married Yesterday.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 24.—Guests who waited in vain yesterday at the Christ Episcopal Church in the Oakcliff suburb of Dallas to witness the wedding of R. A. Bettis and Miss Stella Danzy, learned today that Bettis had been attacked and left for dead in a wood shortly before he should have started for the church. Deputy Sheriff George Patterson found the bridegroom with his throat cut lying near the embankment of the Oakcliff street car track.

Bettis was taken to a hospital and managed to tell at last how he had been decoyed into the Trinity River bottoms by a stranger man, who had knocked him on the head, cut his throat, and rifled his pockets. He remembered nothing between the time when he was felled with a blow on the head and this morning, when he regained consciousness and found himself in a clump of trees. He crawled toward the street car embankment in search of help.

Bettis's fiancée is nursing him. His assailant has not been traced.

TRYING TO SAVE KOTOKU.

New Yorkers Working on Behalf of Condemned Japanese Socialists.

The Ferrer Association of New York protests against the condemnation of Kotoku and his comrades. The Western world asks for facts and will presume, if the trial is secret, that the Japanese Government is unable to support its case. With hope that the impending tragedy may be averted,

LEONARD D. ABBOTT, President.
RAYARD BOYESEN, Secretary.

An appeal, signed by Hutchins Hapgood, Leonard Abbott, Emma Goldman, Hippolyte Havel, Sadakichi Hartmann, Alexander Berkman, Dr. Ben L. Reitman, and Rose Strunsky, has been issued, in which the recipients are asked, "in the name of humanity and international brotherhood, to protest energetically to the Japanese Ambassador in Washington against the unjust and barbarous penalty of death pronounced upon Dr. Denjiro Kotoku, his wife, and twenty-four other Socialists and Anarchists." The appeal goes on:

"Denjiro Kotoku is a man who has devoted himself to intellectual pursuits and has tried to popularize 'Western' ideas in Japan. His 'crime' consists in spreading radical ideas and in translating the works of Karl Marx, Leo Tolstoy, Peter Kropotkin and Michael Bakunin. As a leader of the 'Left' in the social revolutionary movement in Japan he was called the 'head of the Kropotkinists.' We are convinced that the charge of conspiracy against the Emperor is false.

CENSURED JURY RETORTS TO COURT

Judge Swann Told Members He Was Shocked at Their Verdict and Struck Them from List.

THEY FEEL IMPOSED UPON

Certain members of the jury which Judge Swann of General Sessions hauled over the coals on Oct. 4 for bringing in a verdict of "not guilty" in a case where the court thought there should have been a conviction has been holding a number of meetings for discussing the matter, and at a final meeting at the Engineers' Club on Nov. 10 passed by vote of a majority of the twelve resolutions which were made public yesterday.

Judge Swann felt so strongly that justice had been defeated by the verdict of the jury in this particular case that he had the prisoner, David Walsh, re-indicted under another section of the penal law, and he was subsequently convicted and sentenced.

"Your name will be stricken from the jury list as men incompetent and disqualified to sit upon a jury in the County of New York," Judge Swann told the jurors, whom he held in the jury box while, according to their own account, he administered to them a reprimand of great severity, the language of which greatly disturbed and humiliated its members, following which they were dismissed from service, and, in the language of the daily press, "compelled to retire dazed from the court room."

By this experience, these jurors now set forth, they have been subjected to "personal criticism, ridicule, and have suffered a loss of public esteem and dignity," and further on in their resolutions they say:

Primal Right of a Jury.

"We submit that the free, unbiased, uninfluenced, and fearless verdict of a jury has always been held as a primal right, reserved for the exigencies of every citizen, and that any abridgment thereof under color of authority is a public menace."

One of the twelve jurors explained yesterday that all of their number had expressed themselves as in sympathy with some sort of protest, preparations for which began six weeks ago, and that eleven members attended the meetings at one time or another. The resolutions were presented to the last two meetings, and received the endorsement of a majority of the twelve men who were lectured by the jury box. The fact that the resolutions do not bear the endorsement of all twelve, the juror said, was not due to any lack of unanimity in feeling, but largely to the difficulty in getting twelve business men together at any one time. There have been further endorsements by letter, he said, and there was at no time a dissenting voice.

David Walsh was indicted and tried for assault. It was charged against him that, in the early part of August, he went to the rooms occupied by his wife, Nora, and her mother, Mary Connors, in a house in East 110th Street, and figured there in a row that ended in their threatening his arrest, and his brandishing a revolver, which was discharged shortly before he ran away. Nora Walsh and Mrs. Connors testified against him. Walsh admitted the shooting, but declared that he had tried to commit suicide, and that his bullent went wild because his arm was struck. The case was tried before Judge Swann on Oct. 4.

Verdict Shocked the Judge.

The protesting jurors now explain that they were of one mind in the view that, "while the defendant had been guilty of disorderly conduct and some offence against the public peace, they could not agree that he was guilty as charged in the indictment." They reported their inability to the Court, whereupon they received additional instructions and after another short session in the jury room, returned with a verdict of acquittal. This was too much for Judge Swann.

"Well, gentlemen, I am shocked," he said, "to think that a jury in the County of New York would sit here and deliver a verdict of not guilty in the case of a man who would terrorize two women with a loaded revolver and threaten one of them with death, firing at one of them, as claimed. Then you come here and say 'not guilty.' I am positively shocked. I do not want any member of this jury to appear in the court again or to be put on any jury in the County of New York.

"You let him come here to this bar and you hear such dribble as a defence that he intended to commit suicide, and that was why the revolver was discharged. Why, a jury will find this man guilty of attempted suicide upon his own sworn statement, and also of carrying a loaded revolver. Let such a man as this go? Why, never! And if the people of the County of New York want a Judge to sit here and allow dastardly cowards like this to go, they will have to get some one else. You can remember that at my next election. I propose being a candidate for this judgeship again.

Stricken from the Jury List.

"Your names will be stricken from the jury list. After all the papers have said about 'gun toters' and the atrocities committed by them (just such fellows as this defendant) and you allow the verdict of 'not guilty' to obtain, I am surprised. You are excused from the further consideration of any case in this court."

Walsh was indicted the next day for attempted suicide and carrying concealed weapons. He was tried on Oct. 28 for the latter offense, found guilty, and committed to the reformatory for an indeterminate sentence. The second trial lasted fifteen minutes.

Since then the berated jurors have been thinking and talking it over, and a majority of them drew up resolutions by way of "discussion, protest, and resolution," on Nov. 10 at a meeting, "the same being an adjourned meeting and one of several which had assembled for the purpose of considering the subject matter." After setting forth an account of the case and the trial the jurors make this statement:

That said verdict was the only verdict that said jury could have given under the oath which each member had taken, and the only verdict which, considering their belief and conclusion, it was possible for them to find; and had said jurors in the performance of their duty given any other verdict than that which they rendered, it would have been a verdict which was not theirs, and such verdict would have been against the conscience of each individual member.

The Jury Feels Oppressed.

After describing the reception of the verdict by the presiding Judge, the resolutions continue:

Resolved, That because of said happenings, we, as citizens, declare that if said proceedings were not unwarranted, illegal, and oppressive, an imposition upon said jury, and a misuse of the temporary power which a court holds only in the capacity of a public servant, it is our individual duty by all lawful means to endeavor to bring about a change; and

Resolved, That if the verdict of a jury in a criminal case must in any, or every instance be the verdict of the presiding judge as well, failing which said Judge can make such jury in any degree suffer therefor, then we protest that the sacred character of the system has changed, every issue of fact may be left with the court, and people may save themselves the empty formality of providing juries at all.

The resolutions are signed by Benjamin S. Crocker, Chairman, and by Clifford M. Holland, Secretary.

The members of the jury in the Walsh case were Benjamin S. Crocker of 318 West Eighty-fourth Street, Clifford M. Holland, 605 West 178th Street; William Epsie, 273 West 138th Street; Patrick F. Dickinson, 587 Amsterdam Avenue; Joseph Seiferd, 320 East Eighty-fifth Street; James P. Carey, 363 East Thirty-seventh Street; Benjamin Worth, 15 Perry Street; Alfred E. Hopkins, 165 East Sixty-sixth Street; Michael J. Lampert, 77 John Street; Charles G. Johnson, 619 West 143d Street; Theodore S. Corry, 500 West 149th Street, and Louis Fornheimer, 606 West 137th Street.

LOST MEMORY; WANDERED.

Knew His Name and Age, but Forgot Where Daughter Lives.

A man who gives his name as Stewart Tait, wearing a silk hat, a black overcoat, silk faced, a frock coat, and a gold watch and chain was taken to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station last night suffering from lack of memory. He said he had been visiting his daughter in the Bronx and that she lived somewhere in Longwood Avenue. Beyond this he could remember nothing.

The police suggested that he accompany a policeman to Longwood Avenue in an effort to locate his daughter's house.

"I won't walk with a policeman," he replied.

He was found wandering by Patrolman John Donovan at Sixty-sixth Street and Broadway at 8:45 o'clock.

Tait afterward recovered his faculties sufficiently to state that he was 79 years of age, that he was originally in business in Drury Lane, London, but came to this country a number of years ago. He had been in business in Brooklyn and had retired from active life about 1895, and at one time lived with a family named Sabant in Brooklyn.

Policeman Nolan was sent with the man to Longwood Avenue, but after a two-hour search the home of the daughter had not been discovered.

Getting back from the Bronx, Patrolman Nolan took Mr. Tait to the Sixty-sixth Street Subway Station. As they were going down stairs Mr. Tait said:

They went as far as Fourteenth Street, when Mr. Tait said:

"Let us get off here."

They did, and Nolan accompanied his companion. When they came to St. Francis Xavier's Church, in Sixteenth Street, the aged man seemed more confident. Nolan rang all the bells as he went along, and at No. 22, which is a large boarding house, Mr. Tait's son-in-law, George Dick, was found. He and his wife had been expecting Mr. Tait to dinner and were somewhat worried when he did not come.

ASK PAY FOR AIDING AIRMEN.

Rewards for Rescuing Hawley and Post Are Claimed by Quebec Hunters.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 24.—Letters received yesterday by Lewis Spindler of the Aero Club of St. Louis, who went to Toronto to search for Hawley and Post, the aeronauts following the flight of the balloon America II., from St. Louis on Oct. 17, state that two hunters, Joseph Pednaud and Joseph Simrad, are claiming any rewards offered for the discovery of the missing balloonists.

The letter is dated Chicoutimi, Quebec, and says that the men, who were on a hunting expedition, found Hawley and Post and brought them back to civilization, which would have been impossible had they not been thus opportunely rescued.

The letter concludes:

"We are informed that Mr. Harmon of the Aero Club of St. Louis offered a considerable reward to any one who would bring back to civilization, dead or alive, the aeronauts of the America II., and we claim a right to such reward."

BRANNAGAN MET HIS MATCH.

After Beating Up a Humane Agent a Policeman Overpowered Him.

John Brannagan, known as "Dutch" Brannagan, and whose boast has always been that powerful political influence has saved him from being punished for offenses, was held in the Manhattan Avenue Court, Williamsburg, yesterday by Magistrate Nash for a hearing next Tuesday on a charge of assault. He was accused of having attacked William W. Evans of the Brooklyn Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals at South First and Havemeyer Streets. The arrival of Policeman Essig of the Bedford Avenue Station saved Evans from being beaten into insensibility.

Brannagan lives at 242 South First Street and is regarded with terror by his neighbors. Evans at South First and Havemeyer Streets found a horse harnessed to a heavily laden wagon. The animal was covered with bruises and scarcely able to stand. Evans ordered the driver to unhitch the horse. Brannagan interfered, snatched Evans's shield, and knocked him down and kicked him.

Policeman Essig came up and Brannagan turned on him. Essig twisted his arm and knocked further fight out of him.

PACKERS HAVE FATAL FIRE.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—John Juday, marshal of the private fire company of Swift & Co., packers, was burned to death, fifty city firemen were overcome by smoke, and $75,000 damage was done to the lard refinery and grease storehouse of the packing firm by a fire which raged for three hours to-day.

Insufficient water supply for the extra fire engines called out, and crowds which hindered the fire-fighters, were responsible for the extent of the damage. The firemen were overcome by an explosion of a vat of grease, filling the rooms where they were working with dense, odorous smoke, but none was seriously injured.

IN PORT WITH HOLD AFIRE.

Austrian Vessel Reaches Norfolk, Her Cotton Cargo in Flames.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 24.—The Austrian steamer Giulia, Capt. Consulo, bound from New Orleans to Trieste with a valuable cargo of cotton, staves and pig iron, arrived here to-day with a bad fire in her hold. The crew had been fighting the flames unsuccessfully for several days.

Tugs are now pouring steam into the Giulia. Efforts to extinguish the fire will continue for twenty-four hours. If they fail the steamer will then have to be flooded. The fire rages in two holds where 2,000 bales of cotton are stored.

FIRES CONVERSE BARN THREATENS HIS LIFE

LETTERS TO MRS. CONVERSE

Mrs. Sweeney, Divorced, Had Complained to Police Chief—Complaints Against Mrs. Converse.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Nov. 24.—The burning of one of the large barns on the 1,000-acre estate of Edmund C. Converse, at Conyers Manor, at an early hour this morning, has also revealed designs on the life of Mr. Converse by a woman believed to be demented. This woman, or an agent of hers, is believed to have set fire to the building, causing the destruction of thousands of dollars' worth of hay, straw, and winter fruit in barrels, besides imperiling the lives of horses, and men from the Converse house who rescued them. The loss is about $10,000.

It is thought that she may have hired a horse in Stamford and driven to Stanwich to the Converse estate, as tracks of a light carriage were seen at the time of the fire close to the barn, where the flames first broke out. The police are investigating.

The woman under suspicion is known as Menthol Sweeney, the divorced wife of a man named Wood, living at Noroton Heights with the family of a Congregational minister. Some years ago she lived at Round Hill, near Stanwich, and later was in the household of Charles Brown, claiming to be a niece of Mrs. Brown. She is about 30 years old. About six months ago she began writing letters to Police Chief Ritch, telling him that Mr. Converse was trying to "get her out of the way" so that he could purchase a farm adjoining his estate, which, she said, was owned by one Sweeney, who had died and left it to her as a token of appreciation of what she had done for him. The farm is really owned by a man named Raymond.

These letters came frequently. She was possessed with the idea that Mr. Converse had his place covered with wires, and thus kept track of her movements. She appealed to Charles Brown, who is an employee on the Converse estate, to protect her from harm or "suffer the consequences." Last week she appeared in person at Chief Ritch's house and made threats against Mr. Converse's life. Chief Ritch communicated the threats to Mr. Converse, who sent Brown to the police station to use his influence to put a stop to the woman's actions.

Then the woman wrote four letters to Mrs. Converse, whereupon Mrs. Converse sent a physician to Noroton to examine the woman as to her sanity. From what can be learned she has not been in Noroton since Sunday, probably having become aware of what was in store for her.

The destroyed barn was not far distant from the Converse residence, but a friendly wind carried the shower of sparks in an opposite direction.

NEW HYDE EVIDENCE APPEARS

Montana Man Tells of Sending Cyanide to Swope Poisoner 17 Years Ago.

HELENA, Mon., Nov. 24.—If Dr. B. C. Hyde, convicted in Kansas City, Mo., of murder by poisoning Col. Thomas Swope, a wealthy philanthropist, obtains a new trial, it will probably be because Joseph Edgerton, a prominent Helena mining man and a member of the last Legislative Assembly, has related how he sent Hyde a box of cyanide, estimated at two pounds, and how, over seventeen years later, he told Hyde's attorney. Edgerton's statement is considered of great importance, in view of the fact that Hyde, at his trial, could not explain where he had procured cyanide, which he admitted he had been using for many years.

Edgerton's statement in part says:

"In 1893 I was on a crowded train between Cherry Vale and Kansas City, when I met Hyde. We got to talking about cyanide, in which Hyde appeared to be interested. I had been using the stuff in mining operations, and promised to send him some, which I did. I thought no more about the matter for many years, but when Dr. Hyde's trial came on I followed it closely.

"About six weeks ago, while examining a college fraternity directory, I found the name of the Kansas City doctor, and wrote to him in care of his attorney."

OBJECT TO POLICE GUARD.

That Is Why Chauffeurs Stay Out, Taxicab Owners Say.

According to the reports of the representatives of the taxicab companies yesterday a break in the taxicab strike is looked for any time, the principal obstacle being the dislike of the old men to ride on the cab beside a policeman. At the auto and cab department of the Westcott Express Company, at the Grand Central Station, a representative of the company said that sixty-three of their old employes had gone to work, but stipulated that they should ride without a police guard.

The cabs were called in on this account at 4 o'clock, before night began to fall, and service will be resumed at 5 A. M. to-day.

The Mason-Seaman Company said that many of their old employes had reported for work, and were told to get taxicab licenses and report later. At the offices of the New York Taxi-Service Company it was said that the old employes were talking of holding a meeting to decide on the question of giving up the strike, and returning to work in a body.

A meeting of the Strike Committee of the chauffeurs was held in the afternoon at Washington Hall, 781 Eighth Avenue, after which Charles W. Forster, the strike leader, said that the strike will continue until the closed-shop demand is granted. The number of strikers reported at the various garages as having returned to work, he said, was grossly exaggerated. More of the strikebreakers joined the ranks of the strikers than there were strikers who returned to work, he said.

J. C. DEVEREUX SUES TO REGAIN FAMILY

WON'T TELL WHERE SHE IS

Husband Says That on Calling to See His Wife at Her Request He Was Ordered from the House.

Legal steps, begun some time ago by John Chilton Devereux, a lawyer of 50 Church Street and a member of a prominent New Orleans family, to ascertain the present residence of his wife and two children who, he asserts, have been taken from him by her relatives, will be revived in the next few days, according to Herman Fromme, counsel for Devereux.

Mrs. Devereux was Miss Elizabeth Welsh, sister of William Douglas Welsh and the Misses Edith M. and Florence Welsh, and a niece of Samuel Charles Welsh, all of whom are named as defendants in a suit for $200,000 damages brought by Devereux on the ground that they have alienated his wife's affections and kidnapped her and his infant children.

The Welshes have been jewelers here, it is represented, for more than fifty years. The first jewelry store kept by their father was in Greenwich village. The present store is at 256 Broadway, and is conducted under the firm name of George W. Welsh's Sons. Both William Douglas and Samuel Charles Welsh are members of the firm, and Lawyer Fromme, for Devereux, said yesterday that both the Welsh and the Devereux families were rich.

On Wednesday Herman Fromme of Fromme Brothers, 50 Church Street, applied to Justice Seabury to have William Douglas Welsh submit to an examination before the trial of the suit. Justice Seabury took the matter under advisement.

Lawyer Fromme explained yesterday that this step was taken in an attempt to force Welsh to tell where his sister, Mrs. Devereux, and the Devereux children are at present. According to Mr. Fromme, the Welshes say Mrs. Devereux has gone to France on the advice of her physician, but Devereux says this physician has told him that he had not given this advice. Mr. Devereux says his wife may be in France, as her relatives assert, but he has a suspicion that she may still be in this country and charges in his affidavit supporting his suit that she has been and is practically a prisoner.

Mr. Devereux further asserts in his affidavit that his wife's relatives have "conspired to alienate his wife's affections and to separate her from him"; that "they persistently and maliciously worked upon Mrs. Devereux and influenced her until they succeeded in taking her and her two infant children and in permanently alienating her affection," and that "he has continually made efforts to reunite his family, to many of which efforts Mrs. Devereux was inclined to yield, but her relatives have willfully frustrated all such efforts."

Lawyer Fromme declares his client asserts that his wife, then staying with some of her relatives, sent him a note asking him to call on her, and that when he went in response to it he was ordered out of the house by one of the men in the family.

Through Arthur O. Townsend, 31 Nassau Street, counsel for the Welsh family, W. D. Welsh of 229 West Ninety-seventh Street, denies all Devereux's allegations and answers the suit with an affidavit in which he says:

> For some months past I have been receiving in writing, by telephone and by telegraph a series of abusive and threatening communications, in substance charging me with having kidnapped plaintiff's wife and children, of which communications the subjoined copies, Exhibits 1, 2, and 3, are specimens. During the same time the defendant, S. Charles Welsh, the paternal uncle of Mrs. Devereux, has been the subject of abusive "personal" items of a similar nature, published in a daily paper in this city, and there have been posted upon the front door of his place of business notices, a copy of one of which, subjoined as Exhibit 4, is a specimen, the original being signed by plaintiff.

Exhibit 1, referred to, is a night letter dated Suffern, N. Y., July 3 last, in which W. D. Welsh is dared on his peril to return to the city without informing Chilton Devereux, whose name is signed to the message, where the Devereux children are.

Mr. Devereux has filed a counter-affidavit giving the circumstances under which, he says, he sent the communications made public in the Welsh affidavit. Devereux appends a copy of "an open, unsealed letter," which, written in the third person, he says he personally delivered at W. D. Welsh's place of business. This is the letter:

> Mr. Douglas Welsh: Mr. Devereux insists on being told where his two babies, who were kidnapped from No. 610 West One Hundred and Thirteenth Street last April, are, and whether they are alive or dead. Mr. Devereux is particularly anxious about the fate of his babies and sick wife, for as Mr. Welsh will remember when he and his accomplices eight years ago broke up the family of the only other sister who married, that sister died brokenhearted on account of the vile slanders told her of her husband, and the child died also.
>
> Mr. Devereux's motive in thus openly addressing Mr. Welsh is to impress on the Godforsaken, scatter-brained Welsh family breakers and kidnappers the enormity of their double crime and to compel them to restore the two children whom they have kidnapped, to their father.
>
> When so restored, Mr. Devereux will be glad to ignore the Welsh tribe completely, but until they are he will never cease using every effort in his power to punish the wretches guilty of such outrages.
>
> CHILTON DEVEREUX.
> Oct. 14, 1910.

Lawyer Fromme, for Devereux, asserts that his client's wife is easily influenced by those nearest to her, and as her husband cannot reach her she is under the complete control of those with whom she is now associated. Devereux further asserts that the Welsh families named in the suit object to his having anything to do with his wife's property, which came to her from her father's estate.

Devereux is a son of an ex-President of a National bank in New Orleans and is a graduate of the Columbia University Law School. He and Miss Welsh were married in 1905, and have two children, Margaret and John.

BRIDE HELD FOR TRIAL.

Former Servant Charged with Receiving Stolen Goods.

Charged with receiving stolen goods, Mrs. Rosie Neismann, a bride of only a few days, was before Magistrate House in the Yorkville Court yesterday. She was held in $1,000 bail for examination on Saturday. Detective James McCarthy of the Central Office, who arrested her at her home, 372 Seventh Street, Brooklyn, said the woman was suspected of stealing $700 worth of silverware, china, and bric-a-brac from the apartments of William S. May, a lawyer of 5 East Eighty-fourth Street.

Up to last Monday the woman, who is thirty-eight years old, had been employed as a servant in the home of Mrs. Anthony Dey Nichols, when she left to be married. The May family had been away for several months, and upon returning, a few days ago, found that their apartment, two floors above the Nicholses, had been ransacked in their absence. When Detective McCarthy was called into the case and learned that the Nichols servant had left, he traced her.

In the guise of an insurance agent he visited the bride at her Brooklyn home, and, say he noticed on the dining room mantelpiece a French gold clock that answered the description of one that has been stolen from the May apartment. The detective searched the house and found, he alleged in court, $500 worth of the stuff that belonged to the Mays, including thirty-two pieces of cut glass and seventeen pieces of china and bric-a-brac. He then sent for Mrs. Nichols, and she is said to have identified the property as hers.

In court to-day the bride told the Magistrate that several weeks ago a stranger rang the bell of the Nichols apartment and sold her the stuff for $50, promising to return later and sell her some oil paintings very cheap. She was unable to give an accurate description of the stranger.

NAMES 16 CORESPONDENTS.

Mrs. Stewart Now Suing Dr. William J. Stewart for Absolute Divorce.

Mrs. Emma R. Stewart, wife of Dr. William J. Stewart, a wealthy dentist, of 362 West Twenty-third Street, has begun suit for divorce. The action will be tried in White Plains, as the Stewarts live in Yonkers, at 43 Linden Street. The suit was started in September last, and Mrs. Stewart, it is said, has named sixteen corespondents, one of whom is said to be a well-known acress, and two prominent in New York society.

Justice Tompkins at White Plains on Tuesday last granted a motion brought by Mr. Stewart's attorneys to strike out two clauses in the complaint. The defense asked for a bill of particulars as to the identity of a woman known as "Dot," who is said to have been a frequenter of the Haymarket in this city, and two other women with whom the defendant is alleged to have associated between Dec. 1, 1909, and March 1, 1910.

On the failure of Mrs. Stewart to produce the bill of particulars the motion to strike out allegations about the three alleged corespondents was granted.

Mrs. Stewart first asked for allmony and counsel fees. The case will be tried in September.

MORE SHIFTS LIKELY IN POSTAL SERVICE

Discovery of Fraud Will Make Investigation of Department More Widespread.

THREE MEN DISMISSED

Several Changes Announced—Attorney General to Determine Whether There Shall Be Prosecutions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Many changes in the personnel of the Postal Mail Service will come as a result of recent revelations of carelessness or fraud. Preliminary investigations already have led to several dismissals and more are expected to follow.

Three mail clerks at Atlanta, Ga., are among those dismissed, and a Division Superintendent has been reduced. Evidence in the cases has been placed in the hands of the Departmnt of Justice, and officials acting under the Attorney General will determine whether there are to be prosecutions. The revelations of fraud, which involve an annual loss of many thousands of dollars to the Government, have been confined thus far to the South, but Mr. Hitchcock has ordered that the investigation be made general.

These men have been ordered dismissed for irregularities in the weighing of newspaper mail: Edward W. Blodgett, Superintendent of Stations, and James F. Norton and S. F. F. Giles, clerks, all of Atlanta. L. M. Terrell, Superintendent at Atlanta, will be reduced. He will be succeeded by Supt. C. E. Pepper, now at Cleveland, Ohio. Clyde M. Reed, Superintendent of the Division of Railway Adjustment here, will take Mr. Pepper's place, and Mr. Reed's place will be filled by the promotion of C. H. McBride.

The discoveries of fraud in the weighing of all mail are the result of an investigation which was aimed only at the system in vogue. Dishonesty was not suspected, and the discovery has transformed a search for means of economizing in railway fees into a wholesale house cleaning, although the original point, that of ascertaining if the Government is paying the railroads too much for transportation of the mail, will not be lost sight of.

The Postmaster General is preparing a preliminary report for inclusion in his annual statement submitted to the President. Mr. Taft wishes to have all of these reports in his hands in a day or two, as he is already well into the task of preparing his annual message to Congress.

Through additional powers given to the Inter-States Commerce Commission exact information as to how much it costs the railroads to carry the mails is obtainable. With a large force of Inspectors the Postmaster General is having performed the most exact tests of the entire railway mail service system.

CALL IT A RAILROAD MOVE.

Alleged Bankruptcy Threat of Supply Men if Roads May Not Increase Rates.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission, now engaged in hearing the petition of the railroads for higher freight rates, has summoned the officers of the Railway Business Association to testify before the commission as to their reported announcement that the failure of the commission to allow the advances would drive them out of business.

The telegram was sent to George A. Post, President of the association, in New York, requesting him and his associates to state whether or not they made the threat to retire from business, and, if so, why any action adverse to the railroads would cause them to do so. This is the same association which Chairman Knapp of the commission addressed a few nights ago and before whom he championed in a measure the railroads' side of the present question. President Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad also spoke to the railway supply men at the same time.

The members of the Railway Business Association are engaged in the manufacture and sale of supplies to the transportation companies. They declare that they represent $100,000,000 in capital and more than 100,000 employes. To have this vast industry resort to bankruptcy just because their patrons were not allowed to increase their incomes, seemed to demand serious consideration at the hands of the commission.

Attorneys here for the shippers do not take the reported threat of the supply men seriously. They say that it is just another move of the railroads to influence public opinion in favor of rate increases.

Persian Serappi Rugs

BY Persian Serappi we mean rugs made in the very heart of Persia, by the most primitive methods, dyed, of course, with pure vegetable dye; the wool being shorn directly from the sheep and dyed in a manner peculiar to the Orient. This method makes all rugs woven in the above manner practically indestructible.

Lot 2.—Size about 9x12 and 10x13; some other stores ask $175.00,..... $127.50

Special. A Carload of Royal Axminster Rugs, 9x12 foot size. Usually $27.50, at $17.90

BECAUSE of their Oriental designs and textures Royal Axminster Rugs more nearly resemble Oriental Rugs than any other American machine made fabric. We will not sell any to dealers.

☞ Fourth Floor.

150 Royal Wilton Rugs, $30.50

Made of finest wool, absolutely fast dyes, Turkish and Persian Oriental patterns, in tan, olive, green, and newest brown color schemes, 9x12 size; every rug clean, new and perfect. These rugs are ordinarily sold in New York at prices ranging from $37.50 to $40, so be sure and take advantage of this great opportunity.

Kurdistan and Beloochistan Rugs, $17.80

These are the old Persian Mossouls. Sizes about 3.6 to 4 feet wide and 6 to 7.6 long. Extra heavy quality, with handsome designs and soft colors, usually $27 and $28.

IRISH POINT LACE CURTAINS, $3.45

THANKSGIVING MADE JOYOUS FOR ALL

SPORTS WELL PATRONIZED

Perfect Weather Took Thousands to the Golf Links and Football Games —Theatres Are Crowded.

The National bird was sacrificed yesterday. In spite of the high prices for turkey, there were comparatively few homes in which the fowl was not served.

In penal institutions, insane asylums, hospitals, and practically all other places where the wayward, unfortunate, or sick are cared for, turkey dinners were served.

The homeless men of the Bowery gathered at the Bowery Mission for dinner. At the Salvation Army barracks and at the headquarters of other relief organizations crowds of hungry men and women were fed.

Thousands of baskets, filled with Thanksgiving dainties, were distributed at the homes of the sick and infirm. Altogether there was a general observance of Thanksgiving Day throughout the city. Hundreds of boys and girls appeared on the streets in fantastic garb, with their faces covered with masks or daubs of paint.

There could not have been a pleasanter Thanksgiving Day, so far as the weather was concerned, quite unlike Thanksgiving Day of a year ago, when a driving storm made it unpleasant to venture out of doors. Thousands of golfers thronged Van Cortlandt Park yesterday and every other golf links in the neighborhood of the city. Football players, members of the hunt clubs in the suburbs, and those who favor other kinds of Fall or Winter sport, spent most of their day out of doors. The theatres were filled with a Thanksgiving throng both afternoon and night.

Even the city policemen had turkey yesterday. Just who paid the bill the policemen themselves did not know, but it was generally supposed that the express companies had furnished the turkeys to the members of the force in appreciation of the work done by the police in the recent express strike.

One of the largest dispensers of Thanksgiving dinners yesterday was the Department of Public Charities. In addition to the 16,000 inmates and employes of the institutions conducted by the department there were about 1,600 outside poor who were cared for by the Charities Department.

At the Municipal Lodging House, which has an average daily attendance of 1,250, the managers provided Thanksgiving dinners for 1,600 wanderers, and the big new building in East Twenty-fifth Street was crowded throughout the dining hour.

On Randall's Island the 1,500 youngsters, wards of the New York City Children's Hospital and School, were entertained. The New York City Farm Colony at West Brighton also provided the regulation Thanksgiving "spread" for its 532 inmates and 37 employes. The things which went to make up the dinner were all "home-grown."

While some of the institutions did not include turkey on their bill of fares, chicken seemed to please the inmates quite as well. On Blackwell's Island in the New York City Home the City Hospital and the Metropolitan Hospital the inmates ate chicken fricassee, vegetables, and fruit, the latter, together with other delicacies, having been donated by societies and individuals interested in relief work.

William J. Woolman of the brokerage firm of J. S. Bache & Co. distributed through the Hebrew Charities and the Charity Organization Society hundreds of cards entitling the holder to $1 worth of meats, groceries, and other table fare.

At the Newsboys' Lodging House the boys had a great time and the dinner was a success. The dinner was provided yesterday by W. W. Astor, who sent his best wishes. Last night the newsboys in the home gave an entertainment for themselves and a few outside friends. Some of them sang, others recited and did gymnastic feats. There was another newsboys' feast last night. About a hundred youngsters who sell paners were dined at the expense of W. Emlen Roosevelt at the West Side Lodging House in West Thirty-fifth Street. The lodging house is operated in conjunction with the Children's Aid Society.

In the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, at 137th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, the day was observed with exercises on the parade ground. In a reviewing stand near one end of the field sat Oscar Straus, ex-United States Minister to Turkey and a Director of the asylum. With him were Louis Stern, President of the institution; Harry Simon, President of the Asylum Alumni, and other officials. Maurice Simons of the United States Spanish War Veterans presented a set of colors to the institution. The flag was accepted on behalf of the asylum by Mr. Straus, who said:

"Early in the last century a Jewish soldier, who was wounded, went to a hospital for treatment. When he was dying he asked that some Jewish people be brought to his bedside, and when they gathered about him he said he had $300 he desired to leave, with the wish that it be used to start a refuge for Jewish people that might thereafter need such an institution. So, with that small beginning, this present institution was founded."

Mr. Straus told the boys that the flag should inspire them to a feeling of patriotism, which, he said, knows no creed nor race. Exercises were held in several of the other denominational schools.

At the Emanuel Sisterhood of Personal Service, at 318 East Eighty-second Street, 250 boys and girls were entertained at dinner. Youngsters from the neighboring schools and kindergartens were called in. At the Harlem Boys' home, in 127th Street, near Lexington Avenue, 250 lads were also fed turkey and other things. A large number of boys were dined, too, at the Tompkins Square Lodging House for Boys. The dinners were provided by Mrs. D. Willis James.

For the thirty-fourth consecutive year Supt. Henry Meyers of the Protestant Episcopal Mission Society, in Broome Street, looked after the feeding of 1,400 men and women who were unable to provide Thanksgiving dinners for themselves. Before the doors were opened at noon a line of hungry men and women extended from the society's headquarters all the way to Chrystie Street and north for many yards.

Other places where the hungry were fed were at the Bowery Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association and the Florence Crittenton Mission, in Bleecker Street.

In every prison and every detention chamber of the police stations Thanksgiving fare was served yesterday to those unfortunate enough to be behind the bars. There were thirty-seven men and women prisoners in the Fourth District Prison, attached to the Yorkville Court, in East Fifty-seventh Street. At the suggestion of Magistrate House they were treated to a zither recital after dinner. The zither player was Emil Kunzli, one of the court clerks. Magistrate House, all the court attendants, and several police court lawyers went into the cell room and listened to the recital.

The prisoners in the Tombs fared well at dinner time. More than 800 pounds of chicken, 150 pounds of turkey, 200 mince pies, and a barrel or so of apples comprised part of the meal.

The "Alimony Club" in Ludlow Street Jail received Thanksgiving fare from Warden Thomas Rock. Twenty prisoners partook of the dinner. Most of them are in jail for failing to pay alimony. There is one delinquent in Ludlow Street Jail who vowed when he entered to eat nothing but the regular prison fare. It was said at the jail yesterday that this man refused to partake of turkey, much to the amusement of his fellow-prisoners.

In the Essex Market Court Prison, 29 men and 14 women were treated to a turkey dinner and in the West Side Court Prison, 31 prisoners were not only provided with an ample dinner, but the men were handed cigars which had been donated by someone who preferred that his name be unknown.

On Blackwell's Island, the 1,800 inmates of the Penitentiary were entertained with a vaudeville show provided by Percy Williams. The prisoners had turkey for dinner as is usual there on Thanksgiving Day.

In most of the hospitals a special dinner was served to those who were able to eat Thanksgiving fare.

BANQUET 'ND BALL IN BERLIN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—The Americans here celebrated Thanksgiving Day with a banquet and ball at the Reserve Officers' clubhouse to-night. Ambassador Hill presided, and proposed, amid lively enthusiasm, the healths of President Taft and Emperor William. A cablegram was dispatched to the White House conveying the patriotic greetings of the participants in the celebration.

Toasts were responded to by Prof. Münsterberg of Harvard and Prof. Smith of the University of Virginia. Prof. Münsterberg, referring to the things for which Germany and America ought to be mutually thankful, said he had discovered on returning to his own country that German women were patterning themselves after their American sisters, and had become the masters.

Ambassador Hill said the proper Thanksgiving note for Americans resident in Germany was gratitude for the manifold courtesies, the hospitality, and the protection they enjoyed here.

The entire staff of the American Embassy and all the prominent members of the American colony attended the celebration.

OUR SAILORS PLAY FOOTBALL.

Englishmen Curious—Reid Speaks at Thanksgiving Day Banquet.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—American Ambassador Whitelaw Reid and Mrs. Reid gave a Thanksgiving reception at Dorchester House to-day. The guests included the officers of the American visiting fleet.

Elevens from the battleships Idaho and Vermont played a game of football at the Crystal Palace this afternoon for a silver cup given by a London paper. The Idaho's eleven won with a score of 20 to 0. The spectators included many English players who were curious to see the American game.

Ambassador Reid at the Thanksgiving Day banquet of the American Society responded to a toast to "The American Ambassador." He said in the course of his speech:

"I suppose what an Ambassador is sent abroad for under modern and civilized conditions is very simple and straightforward work. It is to look out for the interests of his own country and to protect and promote them so far as he can by honorable and peaceful means. For this purpose it may be that telling the simple truth with good-will may often be quite as useful to the country that sends him as clawing and scratching at the country to which he is sent.

"The pursuit of honorable American diplomacy finds its type neither in the clawless kitten nor in the scratching cat. First protect and promote the interests of your own country. Next, keep the peace. These are the two great commandments. If there is a higher service to be rendered one's country, or humanity, no man has yet pointed it out. If there is a nobler profession connected with merely human affairs, no man has yet found it."

REMEMBER THEIR NEIGHBORS.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Miss Helen M. Gould gave each of her employes to-day a turkey and supply of cranberries. She ate her own Thanksgiving dinner at her town house, 505 Fifth Avenue.

John D. Rockefeller got up an appetite for Thanksgiving by playing golf this morning with a number of friends. He was in unusually good spirits. He had dinner at his home, where there was a family reunion, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr., and their children being present. This afternoon Mr. Rockefeller went for an automobile ride.

At the Ardsley Club the members gave all the employes turkeys for Thanksgiving. Many country homes were open to-day and large parties assembled for the holiday. To-night a number of large dinners were given at the Ardsley Club.

At the Robin's Nest, a home for crippled children, there was a joyous Thanksgiving dinner, sent in by the friends of the institution. Alfred G. Vanderbilt gave some beautiful toys, and among others who contributed articles were Mrs. Edwin Gould, Mrs. Howard Carroll, Mrs. Henry Graves, Mrs. John D. Archbold, Miss Florence King, Miss Virginia Norton, Mrs. John H. Plummer, Miss Jeannette H. Miller, Mrs. William R. Harris, and Mrs. M. S. Beltzhoover. Many people called at the home to-day to see the little cripples and there was a display of the year's work.

SPECIAL SERVICES FOR THANKSGIVING

SPIRITUAL LIFE GROWING

Thanksgiving Day was observed yesterday in most of the churches of the city by services, at which the pastors pointed out those things which appeared to them to be most worthy of gratitude. At the Cathedral of St. John the Divine Bishop Greer told of the great spiritual movement which is manifesting itself among the laity of the city. The Rev. Dr. Robert S. MacArthur, at Calvary Baptist Church, spoke of the growth of religious freedom, and Virgil O. Strickler, at the First Church of Christ Scientist, dwelt on the unity among Christian Scientists, which a joint service with the Second Church bespoke.

Bishop Greer preached at the annual communion service of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew in the crypt of the cathedral on Morningside Heights. After declaring that the spirit of God seems to manifest itself most plainly among men generally after such a startling occurrence as a great calamity of flood, fire, or earthquake and in seasons of common human joy or sorrow when petty rivalries may be forgotten, he went on:

"There have also been times in the history of the Church when great spiritual awakenings have come and which were felt alike by the clergy and the laity. It seems to me that there is now one of those quickening times in the life of the Church. There is a great spiritual movement sweeping over the Church throughout the whole world, affecting all. Sometimes it seems to be more active among the laity than the clergy. The glory of the Lord has been revealed to the lay members of the Church and is causing them to see and know what things they ought to do. The light of God's love is not only manifest in the hearts of the ministers, the priests, and the prophets, but is shining in the hearts and lives of the people. It seems to me as it seems to others that this is 'laymen's day' in the Church. It seems as if it is by the power of the consecrated laymen that this light is to be spread over the face of the world.

"There is in this diocese with its thousands of communicants a latent spiritual power which, if awakened, could affect great spiritual changes in State, Nation, and even the world. Go each of you and try to spread abroad this spiritual light. But first consecrate yourselves to Christ. It is only the consecrated life that can do real lasting missionary work for Christ."

At St. Patrick's Cathedral the annual memorial mass for dead members of the Catholic Benevolent Legion was attended by 1,500 members and many relatives of the departed. The Rev. John A. Mageleisen of St. Nicolas's Church, celebrated, assisted by the Rev. John S. Braun of St. Benedict's Church as deacon and the Rev. George Barthel of St. Joseph's Church as sub-deacon. The Rev. Edwin M. Sweeney of the Church of the Ascension preached.

The Rev. Dr. William Carter of the Madison Avenue Reformed Church struck a note of warning at the union service of his own congregation with that of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in the latter's place of worship. He first traced the history of Thanksgiving Day, declaring that the Puritan settlers had as precedents for the festival not only the Jewish Feast of Tabernacles and the English Harvest Home, but also the Thanksgiving services held in Leyden annually on Oct. 3 for ten years before they sailed from Holland for the deliverance of the Dutch nation from Philip of Spain and the Spanish plots of usurpation.

"It is right," he declared, "on such an occasion, to ask whether we have been as good to God as He has been to us."

Preaching at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, West End Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street, the Rev. Anson P. Atterbury of the Park Avenue Presbyterian Church spoke of the duties of Thanksgiving Day.

"Many of us think," he said, "that simply coming to church, singing a few hymns and listening to a sermon, is all that is necessary to observe Thanksgiving Day. We should be more sincere, we should get close to God on this day of all days and sincerely thank Him. But we should not only thank Him on this day, but should make each day of our lives a day of Thanksgiving."

Three conditions that make possible the feeling of thankfulness were laid down yesterday by the Rev. Dr. Manning at Trinity Church, of which he is rector. In the first place Christians should think more of God and less of themselves. In the second place they should bring themselves more under God's trust, for the happiness of those who really try to serve God is a miracle, and then they should make more use of their privileges as members of the Church, particularly of the Holy Communion.

The Rev. Dr. Robert S. MacArthur spoke on the progress of civil and religious liberty in Europe, and declared it to be a cause of special thanksgiving. He described how the whole world stood with bared head by the hut where Tolstoy died in Russia, even though his ideas were impracticable, and yet they had so far triumphed that a Baptist Church able to seat 10,000 has been permitted in Moscow.

"The Church of Rome wishes to control America," he said. "It desires money from public funds for the support of schools. Think of the countries where it has been in control, and think of the conditions of Papal rule under the Stars and Stripes! Portugal had a debt of $800,000,000, imposed by monarchical extravagance and Papal superstition. The burden was too great to bear and the republic came—the Vatican to the contrary notwithstanding."

THE DAY IN BROOKLYN.

Church Services and Family Reunions Marked the Observances.

Brooklyn celebrated Thanksgiving Day in its usual quiet way, with church services in the morning and family reunions, dinners, dances, and entertainments in the afternoon and evening. Even the Republicans of the borough gave thanks. They were thankful that it was not worse on Nov. 8. They dined on crow, but by much seasoning and spicing of the bird they managed to get it down without grimacing. As for the Democrats, feasting on political turkey and plum pudding, words quite failed them in expressing their thanks.

At the Thanksgiving service in Plymouth Church, in the morning, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise preached on "The State of the Country." A fine musical programme, given under the direction of R. Huntington Woodman, the organist and choirmaster, was a feature of the services in the First Presbyterian Church. Union Thanksgiving services were held by the churches in various neighborhoods. These were at the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian, Clinton Avenue Congregational, Marcy Avenue Baptist, Flatbush Congregational, Embury Memorial Methodist Episcopal, Reformed on the Heights, Sumner Avenue Methodist Episcopal, Grace Methodist Episcopal, and Strong Place Baptist Churches.

A number of organizations of a military character held parades in different parts of the borough in the afternoon and dances at various halls in the evening. Most of the political and social clubs had smokers or other entertainments. At the Almshouse and some other public institutions the inmates were treated to turkey and other Thanksgiving Day dishes.

ANIMALS ARE THANKFUL.

Head Keeper Snyder of the Zoo Served Out Extra Rations Yesterday.

The wild animals in the Central Park menagerie were not forgotten yesterday. Head Keeper William Snyder saw to it that they received extra rations. It was a bit of sentiment on Snyder's part.

"There's no reason why the dumb creatures should not be given something to be thankful for," said Snyder. "The only thing they seem really to appreciate is food, so we are giving them all they can hold."

The inmates of the lion house received 400 pounds of meat yesterday, instead of the usual 250 pounds. Corresponding increases were made in the rations for other beasts and birds in the menagerie. A big crowd was on hand to watch the animals get their Thanksgiving dinner.

French Sailors Dine with Americans.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Thanksgiving celebrations by Americans in Paris were held to-day at the students' hotel and the American girls' club in the Latin Quarter. Sailors from the American warships observed the day as a general holiday at Cherbourg. Special dinners were given to the men, at which a hundred sailors from each of the French warships now in Cherbourg Harbor were the guests of Rear Admiral Vreeland.

PRESIDENT ATTENDS THANKSGIVING MASS

Present at Pan-American Service in Washington—Preacher Appeals for Peace.

WHITE HOUSE FAMILY DINNER

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The President and Mrs. Taft, with the Secretary of State and the entire delegation from the Latin-American nations, attended the second annual Pan-American Thanksgiving service at St. Patrick's Church this morning.

The mass was celebrated in the presence of Cardinal Gibbons and the apostolic delegate to the United States, Archbishop Falconio. The church was decorated with the flags of the various nations of the western hemisphere. The ministers of the mass were clad in new vestments of gold, and the Cardinal's pages wore costumes of pages of Louis XIV.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. Charles Warren Currier. He called upon the world to take note that the service demonstrated that the nations of the western hemisphere honored God. He reviewed the advance of civilization in the Americas, and, looking to the future, particularly urged the nations to cease shedding their brothers' blood in war.

Cardinal Gibbons delivered the final benediction. The service was followed by a reception and breakfast at the rectory.

President Taft ate his Thanksgiving Day dinner at the White House surrounded by his family and a few intimate friends.

Miss Helen Taft, with four college friends, Miss Rice, Miss Vincent, Miss Crane, and Miss Hamilton, drove to the Chevy Chase Club for luncheon, where their hostess was Miss Nagel, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. In addition to the White House party Miss Nagel's guests included Miss Sophy Johnston, Miss Putnam, and Miss Mabel Johnston.

The Vice President's house, in Sixteenth Street, and the Speaker's, in Vermont Avenue, are still closed, these officials and their families preferring to pass the holiday in Utica, N. Y., and Danville, Ill., respectively.

In the Cabinet households family parties were the rule, although the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Secretary of the Interior, being alone in their Washington homes, all joined some hospitable friends for dinner.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Knox had with them Mr. and Mrs. Reid Knox and their little son, Philander C. Knox, third, and Hugh Knox, who came from Valley Forge.

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. MacVeagh had a number of intimate friends to meet Mr. and Mrs. Wayne MacVeagh, who came from their Pennsylvania home for a short visit.

One of the largest of the dinner parties of the day was at the home of Secretary of Commerce and Labor and Mrs. Nagel. The Attorney General and Mrs. Wickersham were present.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Foster, who always entertain a distinguished dinner company of old friends on this day, were the hosts to the Secretary of War, while the bachelor member of the Cabinet, Mr. Hitchcock, was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Gibson.

Fair for St. James's Church.

The annual fair of St. James's Church, Fordham, Jerome Avenue and 190th Street, will be held in the parish house on Wednesday and Thursday next. Among those who will have tables will be Mrs. William Waddell, Mrs. Renner, Mrs. Hoblitzell, and Mrs. J. S. Wheeler. On Thursday afternoon and evening the Junior Choir will give an entertainment consisting of the "Lullabies of Nations," which will be sung in costume, and there will also be tableaux representing scenes from Swiss life and portraits of celebrated characters.

MARTIN LUTHER

Do you know that stern old monk whose rebellion against the Church of Rome changed the religious history of the world? Do you know him as a man—a real, living, breathing, human man?
You will know him in his habit, as he lived, when you read Dr. McGiffert's Life, the first modern, authoritative and interesting life of Luther ever written. You will find that Luther is worth knowing for his own sake, aside from the great movement which he led and its influence upon all religious thought. This Life will have new material in both picture and text. It will be a notable addition to the notable series of Century biographies, and it begins in the Century for December.
This is the Christmas number and it has some wonderful pictures in it—among them paintings in full color. Maurice Hewlett contributes a conversation between himself and his characters, Senhouse and Sanchia. And there are some great stories.

WATER WAGON NIGHT FOR SALVATIONISTS

142 TAKEN BY THE WAYSIDE

For two singing, shouting hours yesterday the Water Wagon, preceded by a Salvation Army brass band and followed by more brass bands and a guard of honor of those who drank and drink no more, passed up and down the city's streets.

It was the Salvation Army's annual round-up under the title of "The Boozers' Day Campaign," personally conducted by Commander Evangeline Booth. There were open-air sessions in the morning, called "preparation services," sectional parades through the Bowery, and other downtown streets at noon, a grand parade headed by a real water wagon in the afternoon, and a "final branding service" at the Salvation Army hall in West Fourteenth Street at night.

In all 150 new penitents were found who wished to sign the pledge and made a pledge over a feast of coffee and rolls that they would drink no more. The parade, advertised to consist exclusively of drunkards and ex-drunkards," was so long that the sprinkling cart at the head of it had turned into Fourteenth Street before the rear of the procession rounded the Flatiron Building. The sixteen blocks of marching men sang and shouted together, while five brass bands kept them company, and new penitents joined the ranks on every block.

The climax of the day came when Commander Booth, a slender young woman, took charge of the exhortation at the evening service, and demanded that all penitent drinking men come forward to kneel at the "mercy seat," consisting of a row of chairs reserved at the front of the main auditorium. Commander Booth told of drinking men she had met and of the reformations that had been made under her own observation. The appeal was not one calculated to be resistable, and soon the aisles were filled with men anxious to get pledges. The audience sitting in the second and third rows of seats had to give way to the penitents and soon a hundred were kneeling while the audience, which packed the main floor and the two upper galleries, sang songs of praise.

A Woman "Boozer" Penitent.

"Where are the women boozers?" shouted Commander Booth. "I know we have them. Here there are only men. Don't think, men and women, that there are no women drunkards. I know that some are here. And don't despair, men, for I know lots of sinners who are worse than you."

Twenty more men came forward at the appeal, and then came a woman. She was not yet 20, but her clothes were torn and her face was very white. She burst into tears before she reached the place reserved for penitents, and a woman in uniform went up the aisle to assist her forward.

"The hundred twenty-first," called out Col. McIntyre from the stage, between numbers from the band. And then he kept on counting up to the hundred forty-second.

The last penitent was a dilapidated figure, whose sobbing could be heard even above the voices of the singers and the band. Two men in uniform knelt beside him for a little while, and then one of them went to the stage.

"The hundred and forty-second penitent," called out Col. McIntyre, "is the father of the young girl who was the first of her sex to come forward. He didn't come here to repent, but he saw his daughter in the line."

The Feature of the Day.

Outside of the "branding session" in the evening the feature of the day was the "Sea of Despair" float that followed the sprinkling wagon through the streets and was then made a rostrum for open-air speeches from 5 to 7 o'clock.

It showed a drunkard sinking in a painted sea, on which were floating empty rum bottles and playing cards. A Salvation Army man in uniform was throwing him a life line from a rocky shore, on which stood a cross with a Salvation Army lassie beside it, holding a Bible in one hand and a cup of coffee in the other.

Banners grouped about the float told of the purposes of the day. Some of them were:

Boozer, what about mother and the little ones?
Drop the Hammer. Take the Elevator.
It's a Tough Old World, Ain't It.
Don't Soak Yourself, but Soak the Devil.
Not the Gold-cure, but the Blood-cure.
Have a Barrel of Smiles with us to-day.

There was a broken wheeled push cart bearing the slogan, "How We Started," and it received much applause, with as much more for the drunkard who rode in it from Chatham Square to the Fourteenth Street headquarters. He had clearly been caught in the day's dragnet and had not yet been escorted to the wash room.

The experiences of drunkards given at every session of the day's series helped to prepare the listeners for the final acts of penitence at night. At the first meeting "Joe the Turk," a swarthy convert to the Salvation Army, danced a whirling dervish in a bright red costume. At the close of his dance he told of a can of beer that tempted him to destruction for a time, when he was a shoemaker next to Mrs. Finnigan's saloon in San Francisco. The beer was passed to him through a hole in the wall, but after a long period of besotted experiences he became a Salvationist and had the hole plastered up. It was twenty-five years ago and he was willing to swear he had never yielded to temptation since.

Sergt. Major Jim Hall of Elizabeth, N. J., a foreman in the Singer Sewer Machine Company, recalled his days in Hell's Kitchen until he was "kicked out" and stumbled hungry and friendless into a Salvation Army meeting over in Elizabeth. It was twenty-eight years ago, and he had worked to convert others ever since, he said. Sergt. Major Hall is now 71 years old. His wife, whom he deserted on taking to drink, was with him yesterday to cheer him on.

A woman introduced as "the notorious and vicious Mrs. Doyle" told of her experiences while "fighting sprees." She joined hands with "Joe the Turk" and Sergt. Major Hall and all three went dancing around the stage to an impromptu tune volunteered by the band.

"The Boozers' Choir" from New York No. 2 Industrial Home sang "Keep Waving All Around the World" and other songs at intervals in the continuous confessional. Fifty men in all told of their experiences in and out of drinking seasons, the series being closed by Jarvis N. Atkinson of Jersey City, who said he was a college graduate, formerly a New York clubman, and a member of the bar in both New York and Jersey. It was a cocktail in a club after he had safely escaped the temptations of his college days, he said, that "woke the devil of drink" in him and sent him down until he was an outcast from his home and family.

For the purposes of the "Booze Crusade" which was the Salvation Army's second annual observance of the day, the city was divided into four sections, centring respectively about Herald Square, Union Square, Abingdon Square, and the Jefferson Market Police Court. Besides the 150 men who came forward at night, about 1,500 others signed the pledge.

POLICE TO CENSOR DANCES AND POSTERS

Deputy Commissioner Driscoll and His Staff Have the Job and Are Busy Already.

WATCHING MASKED BALLS

Theatrical Advertisements Also to be Closely Scanned—Woman Stabbing an Officer, for Instance, Won't Do.

The Police Department has begun a decency crusade. A complete circuit was made yesterday of all places where masquerades were held with a view to stopping anything improper. Each masked parade was inspected by First Deputy Commissioner Driscoll and members of his staff in the day time, and last night the police made the rounds of nearly every masquerade ball and dance, to eliminate obnoxious features.

The police say they found nothing objectionable in the masquerade parades. At the mask balls they visited, they were instructed to take notes of all that seemed to include in their programme features that were improper or in bad taste. These places, it was said, will be denied permits when they ask again for them.

Twenty-eight protests had been received at Police Headquarters against a single ball scheduled for Election eve. The police were sent to the ballroom and ordered to notify the managers that the place would be closed, if the programme contained anything improper, and that no permit would in that case be issued to those in charge for future affairs of the sort.

The police crusade will also take up indecent advertising. In many cases, the police say, the advertisements announcing the masquerade balls are far more objectionable than the balls themselves. To obviate this, it is proposed to require all managers of such balls to submit copies of their advertisements to the police before the permits are issued.

The advertisements of theatrical performances are to come under the same censorship, and all posters that are considered degrading will receive prompt attention from the police. As an example of the kind of poster that is considered objectionable, there was mentioned at Headquarters last night one in which a woman is shown in the act of stabbing a Russian officer. This, it is held, has an undesirable and degrading influence on many persons, especially children. Grewsome as well as indecent posters are to come under the police ban.

Yesterday, Deputy Commissioner Driscoll, after inspecting the masquerade parades in Manhattan, made a tour of Staten Island. He found the police conditions there far from what they should be. Few men assigned to cover large territories, and in one case, four policemen are supposed to guard an area of 16½ square miles. He promised to give the better policing of the island his early attention.

Leper Home Needs Bandages.

An appeal for bandage material for the Bethesda Leper Home has been issued by A. Dan Wolterbeck of 1 and 3 Ann Street. It asks for old linen, cotton, and cheese cloth, but not for colored materials. If rolls of bandages are sent, they should be not more than two or three inches in diameter and from two to three inches wide. To keep the packages clean in transit it is requested that if they are too large for a paper wrapping they should be inclosed in boxes. They should be sent prepaid to Mr. Wolterbeck at his office.

Past and gone are the days when from lack of choice you bought your hosiery without either assurance or guarantee of reasonable service—gone too are the days when to secure anything like reasonable service—by which we mean that six pairs should give perfect service for six months or longer—you were compelled to sacrifice both appearance and comfort. Everwear hose to-day combine sightliness of appearance, comfort, durability and economy to a greater extent than is to be had in any other hose at any price.

Everwear HOSIERY

is soft, smooth and silky, lightweight, seamless and perfect fitting. In appearance, of which we ask you to be the judge, it will compare most favorably with any hosiery of equal price and many which cost more. Its durability and consequent economy are the result of two exclusive Everwear processes, the dyeing and knitting, which produce a strong, uniform texture which laughs at laundries and hard wear. A box of 6 pairs, guaranteed 6 months, in silk lisle—for men 3.00, for women 3.00—in Egyptian cotton—for men 1.50, for women 2.00, for children 2.00.

Extraordinary News for Men!
6936 New SHIRTS of Gimbel $1.50 Standard
at 85c

Months ago we were promised by certain leading makers of shirts that, in consideration of the large orders we placed for the opening of our New York Store, we should have first choice of all their stock-on-hand after their Fall orders were filled--at a particularly attractive figure.

THE SHIRTS ARE READY TODAY --and a finer, handsomer lot could hardly be found at full prices. NOT A SHIRT IN THE WHOLE COLLECTION OF NEARLY 7000 IS LESS THAN $1.50 QUALITY, based on standard GIMBEL valuations. Patterns that a man would naturally choose from a regular assortment. The shirts are all new, and the laundry-work is excellent. Comprised in the offering are the following groups:

Forty-two hundred Negligee Shirts of unusually fine madras, Jacquard-figured, corded, or satin-striped, with neat figures and stripes, mostly in black. Coat style, attached stiff cuffs.

Nine hundred Negligee Shirts of mercerized madras, delightfully comfortable, in self-striped or colored striped effects on white, tan and pongee grounds, also other fast colors. Soft double cuffs

Plaited-bosom shirts in handsome patterns
Soft mercerized shirts, with collars attached, for golf or tennis
Percale shirts of fine grade in neat designs
Plaited-bosom white Pique shirts
Shirts of white Oxford cheviot
Printed cheviot shirts with soft cuffs

All told, a wonderful variety of desirable styles, and all

Men's Gimbel Shoes of Good Service

Incidentally, the "good service" is part of the Shoe Store as well as of the shoes. In the one, it means prompt, efficient attention from experts; especially in the case of feet that are difficult to fit. In the other, it signifies the lasting quality that comes from good materials well put together, and blended with comfort and style. At $3.50 to $7, the returns on a man's shoe investment here are equally satisfactory.

Besides proper shoes in all leathers, for all times and occasions, there are these of special interest:

PENNSY TRIUMPHS OVER CORNELL, 12-6

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 24.—Inaugurated in disaster and climaxed in triumph. Such is Pennsylvania's football history for 1910. Outplaying Cornell the greater part of a hard battle the Quakers won the annual Thanksgiving contest on Franklin Field by a score 12 to 6. The largest crowd that has assembled inside the red and blue athletic inclosure this season witnessed the game. Twenty thousand were thrilled by a series of sensations. While part of the great throng was still entering the field Pennsylvania scored her first touchdown. There was less than five minutes of nerve-racking struggle when Mercer ran for a touchdown, the most brilliant run of the afternoon.

In the second period Sommer went crashing through the red and white line for the Quakers' second and last touchdown, this score being a highly sensational culmination of a series of spectacular dashes. From Penn's forty-five-yard line the red and blue dashed around the Cornell ends, plunged through the line and forward passed until the ball had reached the Ithacans eight-yard mark. Six powerful scrimmages had accomplished this advance. Then, as Sommer took the ball from Ramsdell on a double pass, the Pennsylvania stands sprang into sensate life with a burst of red and blue color just as the big pack plowed a path through the red line for a touchdown. This was the extent of Penn's scoring, but the Quakers were almost continually on the offensiv, and had many golden opportunities to increase their total, but failed in the crucial test. Cornell could not pass the Pennsylvania goal. The Ithacans scored twice on pretty field goals from placement in the second and third periods. Butler, the speedy, elusive little Cornell back, kicked both. His first effort was from the twenty-five-yard mark and directly back of the goal posts. But his second goal was beautiful, and showed a skill and finesse that has not been equaled on Franklin Field this year. Standing on Penn's forty-three-yard mark, far to the north side of the field, at an angle every one considered far too difficult to expect success, Butler showed his consummate nerve by kicking the ball with an accuracy and force that carried the oval between the white posts for 3 points.

Cornell was stronger than the Quakers had anticipated. Their attack was nicely varied and open. While it did not make much of an impression on the powerful defense of the Quaker line, still the Ithacans were able to get within the Quakers fifteen-yard line three times by reason of recovering fumbled punts. But this was the furthest point the Red and White advanced. Every attempt to progress beyond this mark was repulsed by the hardest defensive tactics the Quakers have shown this year. The Ithacans did not possess an attack sufficiently powerful to pierce the Quaker defense in crises.

Pennsylvania's first touchdown produced the sensational feature of the conflict. Several runs were made that equaled Mercer's magnificient feat in distance, but none approached it in consummation, a wonderful open field dash that displayed brilliant individual excellence. It was a wonderful sight. As the peerless player started on his touchdown-making run the Red and Blue cohorts arose with a sudden roar.

Cornell's thousands stood up slowly and silently, like the long heaving swell of a summer sea, black, ominous and murmuring. Cornell did not anticipate a touchdown so quickly against her team. A momentary groan escaped the Ithacans as they saw Mercer tearing around the right end eluding this tackler, now that, gradually drawing nearer to the goal line, and finally having passed Nichols by a wonderful dodging motion, he circled the still pursuing Ithacans until he had placed the ball directly back of the goal posts. It was then that every Red and White flag sank out of sight and Cornell's partisans, silent and hopeful before, dropped back into their seats as the wild, triumphant shouts of old Penn came thundering from all parts of the field.

Pennsylvania.	Position.	Cornell.

Mercer, Young	Full back	Wilson

Touchdowns—Mercer, Sommer. Goals from touchdowns—Ramsdell, (2.) Goal from placement—Butler. (2.) Referee—Joseph Pendleton, Bowdoin. Umpire—A. H. Sharpe, Yale. Field judge—W. S. Langford, Trinity. Head linesman—C. J. McCarthy, Jr., Germantown. Time of periods—Fifteen minutes.

Indiana Ahead in Football.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 24.—Financially speaking, the Indiana University Athletic Association is better off this year than in any past season. Receipts from the conference games played with Chicago, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Purdue amounted to more than $15,000, one-half of which was Indiana's share. The most profitable game of any was the Wisconson contest, played at Indianapolis, which drew a crowd of 9,000.

Several Hurt in Football Game.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 24.—Satterfield of William Jewell College had his left arm broken, and Roy Martin, the Captain, was knocked unconscious in the game here to-day with Ottawa. One Ottawa man had his shoulder dislocated, another his knee cap, and several other players suffered minor injuries. The score was 11 to 6 in favor of William Jewell.

Cornell and Michigan in Baseball.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 24.—As a result of the recent breach in athletic relations between Notre Dame and the University of Michigan a baseball game with Cornell at Ann Arbor on June 3 has been substituted for the scheduled Notre Dame game. Michigan will also play Cornell at Ithaca, as previously scheduled.

Two More Teams for Cycle Race.

Two teams which are bound to play a leading role in the international six-day team bicycle race at Madison Square Garden, Dec. 4 to 10, signed entry blanks yesterday. The combinations are Joe Fogler of New York and Fred Hill of Boston, and Eddie Root of New York and Jimmy Moran of Chelsea, Mass.

SYRACUSE WINS IN WEST.

St. Louis University Beaten by Two Goals from the Field.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 24.—Syracuse University defeated the St. Louis University football team here this afternoon by a score of 6 to 0. The Eastern team made three points in the first period, and three more in the last. The points were made by goals from the field.

Although St. Louis played brilliantly, the team could not overcome the great work of Wilkinson, left half back, and Waldron, quarter, on the Syracuse eleven. They displayed the best football that has been seen here this season.

Wilkinson kicked the first goal. The ball came into Syracuse's possesion on St. Louis's seventeen-yard line. On the second attempt Frye made five yards off tackle, and Wilkinson put the ball on St. Louis's eight-yard line by a plunge through tackle. Fogg was thrown for a yard loss. With the goal to gain, Waldron tried an end rush, but was thrown for a three-yard loss. On the third down, Wilkinson kicked.

No points were made in the second quarter. Each side attempted forward passes, but they were interfered with. In this quarter each side was penalized. The second period ended with the ball on St. Louis's forty-yard line. The third quarter was a hard struggle, in which Syracuse failed twice to kick from placement.

Waite kicked goal in the fourth period from the twenty-five-yard line. The quarter was characterized by free kicks. No forward passes were made, but fake kicks netted gains for Syracuse. Each team made frequent changes in the players toward the end, but neither side was able to get the ball to the goal line. The game ended with the ball on St. Louis's twenty-five-yard line.

Navy Cheered in Last Practice.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 24.—The full brigade of Midshipmen and many members of the Naval Academy staff saw the Academy team in action on the home grounds for the last time this season, and at the conclusion of the practice sent up a mighty yell to celebrate the fact that there were no accidents and the Navy would be represented by its full strength against the Army on Saturday. The only regulars who are not in perfect shape are Clay, right half back, who has had a lame shoulder from an injury of several years' standing, and Douglas, the big tackle, who was bruised above the knee, and who has been limping for some days. This morning Douglas's leg was operated on and a clot of blood removed. He began to improve at once and it is thought he will be in good shape Saturday. Head Coach Berrian said to-day that Douglas weighs 180 pounds, 18 pounds more than Davis, so that the substitution increases the weight of the team materially. However, Davis is a very good man, and will go in on the least sign of weakening on the part of Douglas. The team is unusually strong in substitutes scarcely inferior to the regular occupants of the places.

RED BANK, N. J., Nov. 24.—The Monmouth County Hounds held a special holiday hunt this afternoon, the meet being at Middletown Station on account of waiting for some of the New York huntsmen who came by train. There was some delay in getting started, and the drag was not finished until nearly dark. The route laid out for the hunt was perfect, there being plenty of fences, brooks, meadowland, and open running. Only the most experienced horsemen could follow the pack. The start was on the Bennett farms at Middletown, and the scent was over farms in Lincroft, Morrisville, Holmdel, and Marlboro to the finish, Wicktunk, near R. J. Collier's property. About a dozen automobiles and as many carriages followed the huntsmen along the road, containing happy hunting parties. Among the parties were automobiles belonging to Howard S. Borden, E. A. S. Clark, W. S. Jones, Sr., C. D. Halsey, William A. Kennedy, M. M. Thompson, and Harry Longstreet.

The hunt was very stiff, which necessitated three checks during the run of twelve miles. In taking a fence about a mile from the finish Howard Borden's hunter was caught by a rail, its hind legs hanging to the fence. Borden dismounted, and with the aid of some of the huntsmen the horse was freed. It was cut considerably, but not seriously.

Those who rode to the finish were W. Strother Jones, Sr., Master; George Pells, Thomas D. Field, Arthur McClure, W. S. Jones, Jr., Walter McClure, Howard S. Borden, Harold Aumach, and Patrick Donohue and James Reynolds, whips.

Spellbound's Thanksgiving Handicap.

OAKLAND, Cal., Nov. 24.—In the presence of the largest crowd of the season Spellbound won the Thanksgiving Handicap from a high-class field at Emeryville to-day. There were light showers during the afternoon, but the track was good. Bubbling Water was the favorite for the handicap, which was at a mile and a furlong. She lost considerable ground through failure to obtain clear sailing, and was unable to catch Spellbound when it came to the struggle through the final quarter.

BROWN WEAKENS NEAR END.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 24.—Brown University found the Carlisle Indians a stubborn proposition to-day, and although the local eleven twice crossed the opposite goal line and added three more points on a field goal, it withered before the onslaughts of the visitors in the third period, when the Indians also scored, the game ending with Brown the winner, 15 to 6.

For the first two periods everything went Brown's way, although errors of holding and off-side play held the score to Sprackling's field goal from the forty-yard line and McKay's touchdown, accomplished mostly on forward passes and wing shifts.

The Indians rallied in the third period. After Sprackling had failed at another field goal, the visitors by plunges into the line masked by a fake kick formation, tossed the Brown team aside for repeated gains until a first down was gained on Brown's one-yard line. Another plunge by Hauser carried the ball over.

Early in the fourth period Hauser came near making a field goal, missing by a few feet. This ended the Indians' chances, for they not only weakened, but a fumble gave Brown the ball on Carlisle's thirty-five-yard line. Two fine forward passes, one coming in the second down on the Indians' four-yard line, gave Brown her second touchdown.

It was a finely played game, bristling with trick plays, forward passes, and long end runs behind good interference. The punting was less than usual. The line-up:

Brown.	Position.	Carlisle.
Sisson	Centre	Garlow
Corp, Gollisberg	Right guard	Burd
Kratz, Bartlett	Right tackle	Powell
Ashbaugh	Right end	Kennerly
Sprackling, Crowthers	Quarter back	Hauser, Arcasa
McKay	Right half back	Wheelock, Bupnis
High	Full back	Newashe

Four Teams Tied in Golf.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Nov. 24.—The golf season was concluded at the Plainfield Country Club to-day with a four-ball match cross-country tournament for both Class A and Class B players. Prizes were offered the winning team in each class. In Class A four teams were tied for first place with a net score of 45, while C. M. Church and G. C. Riggs won the event in Class B with a net score of 45. The course comprised nine selected holes. The scores:

Class A—R. S. Rowland and M. J. Dumont, 51, 6—45; H. D. Hibbard and C. B. Morgan, 51, 6—45; L. G. Carman and A. M. Collens, 55, 10—45; S. H. Patterson and E. T. Willson, 54, 9—45; D. H. Rowland and C. C. Burke, 58, 12—46; J. E. Erickson and E. P. Goodwin, 59, 10—49.

Class B—C. M. Church and C. C. Riggs, 61, 16—45; L. H. Gates and H. E. Moore, 68, 20—48; H. E. Fox and E. J. Patterson, 63, 15—48; George S. Clay and A. W. Kleinecke, 67, 18—49; J. P. Stevens and N. C. Barnhart, 68, 21—47; C. W. King and G. F. Earl, 74, 17—57.

TWO TIES IN SOCCER.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Nov. 24.—Columbia University's association football team spent part of Thanksgiving Day here, meeting the eleven of the Montclair Athletic Club on the grounds of the latter. The result was a tie, after a no-scoring first period of play. Montclair broke the ice soon after the restart, the tally being the result of a long, well-directed shot on the part of Murray, the local left back. Thereupon the collegians put on full steam, and a brilliant bit of combination play between Dwyer and Capt. Semple at inside left enabled the latter to get by the home defense and score the goal that saved defeat. There was no further scoring. The line-up:

Columbia.	Position.	Montclair A. C.
Spencer, E. B.	Goal	Mills
Spencer, F. B.	Right back	Webber
Murphy	Right half	Stroud
Rodrigues	Centre half	Nelson
Hueng	Outside right	Neil
Campbell	Inside right	Stone
Dwyer	Centre	Gardner

Struggling through two periods without result in the second round of the annual cup tie series of the American Football Association two Brooklyn teams, the Clan McDonalds, champions of the Amateur League, and the Brooklyn Celtics played a no-scoring game at Marquette Oval in Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, in the presence of 2,500 people. The line-up:

Brooklyn Celtics.	Position.	Clan McDonalds.
Gavin	Goal	Wilson
Crawford	Right back	Hulme
McGarry	Right half	Dick
Owens	Left half	Ball
McKee	Outside right	Faulds
O'Halloran	Inside right	Hastie
Campion	Centre	Peters

Joe Thomas at Marathon Club.

Joe Thomas, ex-middle weight champion, who twice went the limit of twenty rounds with Stanley Ketchel and lost the title in thirty-two rounds, will try to come back at the Marathon Athletic Club on Monday night.

Thomas is scheduled to box Connie Schmidt in the main bout of ten rounds and if the ex-champion is successful he will probably be substituted for Schmidt with Sailor Burke at the National Club the following week. Thomas is working hard to get in condition for the bout.

Johnson-Langford Match Proposed.

BOSTON, Nov. 24.—Joe Woodman, manager of Sam Langford, is in receipt of a letter from Hugh McIntosh, the Australian boxing promoter, in which McIntosh offers to give Jack Johnson $15,000 and expenses for his end of a fight with Langford, to take place in London during Coronation week. In the letter McIntosh asks Woodman to make every possible effort to close the match with Johnson. In making the match McIntosh requires that Johnson shall post $15,000 to guarantee his appearance in London.

MAX

You will find a double delight in Mrs. Thurston's new story. For it is not only a love story, fascinating and mysterious, but a picture of Paris so vivid and so real that you will be able to follow Max from the moment of arrival in Paris in the gray of the early morning through many wanderings to the end of the story. Almost without exception the reviewers say the story is better than "The Masquerader" (high praise indeed), "more breathless in interest, with a central situation just as strong."

COMMERCE HALTS CLINTON'S ATTACK

10,000 School Boys and Girls Cheer and Sing as Teams Play No-Score Game.

Before a crowd of 10,000 enthusiastic high school students De Witt Clinton High School and the High School of Commerce fought each other to a standstill at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon, the game resulting in a no-score tie. Although Clinton was a faster and better organized combination, Commerce played a great defensive game, and guarded its goal line well. Twice Clinton walked over Commerce so easily that a touchdown seemed a certainty, but a poor forward pass on the twenty-yard line spoiled the first chance, and a stone wall brace by Commerce on her own one-yard line withstood Clinton's assault in the third period, and it lost the ball on downs.

The game was hard-fought, and the Commerce players were pretty well used up under the grueling. Time was taken out frequently in the second half of the game because of injuries to Commerce players. Blenlo, the Commerce full back, was hurt in the last period and was carried off the field. The extent of his injury has not been determined, but a hasty examination by a physician showed that one hip was badly bruised and possibly the bone was dislocated. Renner and Kear got injured ankles and had to leave the game. The Clinton team played the game without a change. Commerce had very little in the attacking line that Clinton could not smother. One fake play in which there was a delayed pass, with Capt. Kear carrying the ball, fooled Clinton a few times, but as soon as Clinton once diagnosed it Commerce lost rather than gained with it. Clinton had a smashing attack, which started quickly, and at times the backs tore the Commerce line badly, but when it came to a final stand Commerce always managed to have enough right left in them to stand off the Clinton rushes.

Clinton had a fine chance to score shortly after the game started. Kear caught Davis's kick-off and fumbled, Clinton nabbing the ball in the wild scramble which followed. With the ball on the twenty-yard line, Davis made an onside kick, but it rolled over the goal line before any of the Clinton players could get it. Commerce got her fake kick and delayed pass formation working, and fooled Clinton twice for good gains. Clinton used new football most of the time, onside kicks and forward passes, but failed to gain very much. The Commerce ends, Kear and McCusker, were fast in breaking up Clinton's tricks with new football.

In the second period Clinton brought the ball down into Commerce territory in a procession of hard line plunges. Rosza, Cumiskey, and Sullivan smashed through for from six to ten yards at a clip, and from midfield the ball went down the field thirty yards. On the twenty-yard line Cumiskey shot a forward pass to Wright, but Commerce blocked it. The second half gave Clinton a golden opportunity, but just when victory was within easy reach the Commerce line stiffened and wouldn't budge. After Davis kicked off in the third period Love ran the ball in fifteen yards. Fetter tried the left end, but was thrown. Fetter then dropped back to punt. Just as he was about to boot the ball Wright, Clinton's negro end, came rushing down on him and blocked the kick. Telfer, the other end, fell on the ball on the ten-yard line.

Rosza was jammed into the line, and got five yards. Sullivan then carried the ball four more, and Clinton lined up for the final plunge. The Commerce line was solid, and when Rosza threw himself at the line again the ball was still a foot from the goal line. Wild cheers greeted Commerce for the plucky stand in the last ditch.

The punting of Davis and Fetter was good, both getting their kicks away, well placed and high, so the ends could get under them. In the last period Davis, from the twenty-five-yard line, made an attempt to kick a goal from the field, but he missed by a narrow margin. The line-up:

Greenburg	Centre	Strong
White	Right guard	McLaughlin

BOYS' HIGH VICTORY.

Tabor Kicks Goal from Field, Defeating Manual Training School.

Fancy playing and lost opportunities marked the football game yesterday at Saratoga Park, Brooklyn, between Boys' High and Manual Training High Schools, in which the former were victorious by the score of 3 to 0. Both sides put up an interesting game during the first two periods, in which Manual's goal line was almost crossed on two occasions. As neither side scored until the third period, when Tabor of Boys' High got a free catch, and chose a goal from placement, in which he was successful, the game was marked with "grandstand" and individual playing. But once scored on Manual set down to real work, and the remainder of the game was contested closely.

In the first period Boys' High worked the ball up to Manual's five-yard line, where Fonda made two yards on a tackle, but suffered a penalty of 15 yards for holding. Manual made a bad forward pass to centre, but Fonda recovered the ball and worked it to the three-yard line, where it was held on downs.

Penalties spoiled the chances of both teams in the second period, which was marked by a lot of punting. Tabor and Dingwall doing the kicking for their respective teams. Neither was successful in clearing the lines and no gains were made, and then Boys' High turned their attention to forward passes and fancy plays that continued throughout the period.

Dingwall opened the third period with a punt of 25 yards to Fonda. Fonda passed the ball to Tabor, who returned the punt for Boys' High. Tabor then obtained the ball and attempted a field goal from the thirty-five-yard line, but was cleverly blocked by Dingwall. The latter made an onside kick to Tabor, and then Boys' High tried to work a forward pass, but failed. With the ball in Manual's possession they tried for a kick. Boys' High returned the kick and Manual was on the five-yard line with the ball in their possession. Dingwall kicked from behind goal post on which Tabor got a free catch on the twenty-yard line and chose a goal from placement, which he mastered in unique style and won the game.

The final period was much like the second. Penalties were numerous, and Boys' High resorted to fancy playing, kicking, and an attempted forward pass. Six thousand persons saw the game. The line-up:

Cook	Centre	Dobbins
Spurgeon, (Hart)	Right guard	Blog
Kenney	Right tackle	Brundye
Ackerman	Right end	Tabor
Foley, (Burchard)	Quarter back	Collins
Greene	Left half back	Baer
Rhonig	Right half back	James
Lente	Full back	Fonda

Goal from placement—Tabor. Referee—Mr. Fauver. Umpire—Barrett. Linesmen—Lanning and Reid. Time of periods—12, 13, 12, 13.

Brooklyn Preparatory Wins.

Nebraska, 119; Haskell Indians, 0.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 24.—The Haskell Indians were disastrously defeated by the State University on Nebraska Field to-day by a score of 119 to 0. It was Nebraska's high score for the season, and almost a record for a Western team. The Haskell team failed to offer any effectual resistance to the Nebraskans and were smothered from the start. Nebraska scored repeatedly on long end runs, fake plays, and forward passes. The forward pass was used to good advantage by the Nebraskans. The play was used eleven times for a total gain of 205 yards.

TRIPLE TIE IN GOLF.

LAKEWOOD, Nov. 24.—A triple tie for the low score medal marked the eighteen-hole testing round of the invitation golf tournament which began to-day on the links of the Country Club of Lakewood. When all the cards had been posted it was found that P. W. Whittemore of Brookline, Walter J. Travis of Garden City, and H. C. Richands of St. Andrews's headed the list with totals of 78.

There were 144 starters, making one of the largest fields ever handled here. Out of this number 108 cards were returned, so that little more than half will be able to continue tomorrow, as the programme only provides for four sixteens. In addition to the trial mentioned other well-known amateurs to qualify in the first sixteen were Findlay S. Douglas, with an 81, and George T. Brokaw, with 84. Arden M. Robbins was another to get in, while C. N. P. Phillips of Atlantic City furnished the surprise of the day by returning a 79, which included a 6 at the home hole.

Unlike his usual precision, Travis tripped up at the eleventh, the shortest hole on the course, where he got into the water and took 6. Even at that he came home in 39, the same as he took for the long outward journey. Those with 87 or better made the first sixteen.

Walter J. Travis, Garden City, 39, 39—78; H. C. Richards, St. Andrew's, 44, 34—78; P. W. Whittemore, Brookline, 41, 37—78; C. N. Phillips, Atlantic City, 44, 35—79; M. Molloy, Garden City, 43, 37—80; Percy Platt, Deal, 44, 37—81; F. S. Douglas, Nassau, 43, 38—81; S. K. de Forest, Lakewood, 44, 40—84; R. Mott, Riverton, 44, 40—84; G. T. Brokaw, Garden City, 47, 37—84; R. L. Redfield, Montclair, 45, 39—84; H. F. Whitney, Nassau, 45, 40—85; W. K. Gillett, Wykagyl, 46, 39—85; E. G. Fraser Deal, 47, 39—86; H. Cozens-Hardy, Fox Hills, 45, 41—86; J. E. Smith, Wilmington, 49, 38—87; Arden M. Robbins, Garden City, 44, 43—87; D. C. Mabon, Ardsley, 45 43—88; C. E. F. McCann, Nassau, 50, 38—88; W. A. Engeman, Nassau, 45, 43—88; W. E. Helm, Richmond County, 49, 39—88; J. B. Turner, Jr., Deal, 46, 42—88; A. E. Jones, Nassau, 46, 42—88; E. P. Rogers, Shinnecock Hills, 51, 38—89; J. F. Shanley, Sr., Deal, 47, 42—89; J. F. Shanley, Jr., Deal, 50, 39—89; H. Tappin, Westbrook, 49, 40—89; J. D. Scott, Rumson, 52, 37—89; W. Helyer, Riverton, 48, 41—89; P. W. Kendal, Deal, 51, 38—89; F. S. Wheler, Apawamis, 47, 42—89; Dr. T. Seaseman, Atlantic City, 49 41—90; G. F. Brown, Huntington Valley, 47, 43—90; C. H. Burr, Huntington Valley, 49, 41—90; W. J. Condon, Greenwich, 49, 41—90; H. S. Hicks, Atlantic City, 51, 39—90; A. E. Whitney, Lakewood, 45 45—90; S. Y. Ramage, Oil City, 49, 41—90; J. T. Burden, Jr., Garden City, 47, 43—90; J. T. Smith, Deal, 46, 44—90; J. E. Kelley, Rumson, 50, 40—90; F. Schavoir, Wee Burn, 49, 41—90; H. K. Kerr, Ekwanok 47, 43—90; N. W. Anthony, Deal, 50, 41—91; P. S. P. Randolph, Jr., Lakewood, 48, 43—91; C. W. Harmon, Wykagyl, 50, 41—91; C. V. Meserole, Dyker Meadow, 49, 42—91; A. F. Southerland, Essex County, 51, 41—92; W. T. Stern, St. Andrew's, 51, 41—92; H. W. Brown, Philadelphia Country Club, 48, 44—92; A. J. McClure, Albany, 49, 43—92; W. P. Lough, Richmond County, 47 45—92; A. R. Allen, Montclair, 49, 44—93; C. T. Richardson, Lakewood, 49, 44—93; W. B. Averill, Garden City, 51, 42—93; A. P. Palmer, Crescent A. C., 51, 42—93; A. S. Ridley, Englewood, 49, 44—93; Dr. F. H. McCall, Atlantic City, 51 43—94; H. M. Sweeney, Oil City, 53, 41—94; F. H. Webster, Westbrook, 51, 43—94; H. B. McClellan, Fox Hills, 50, 44—94, and P. S. P. Randolph, Lakewood, 49, 45—94.

An eighteen-hole medal play handicap kept the members of the Dyker Meadow Golf Club busy yesterday. There were forty-three starters, and F. B. Fiske won with an 80 net. The scores were as follows:

F. B. Fiske, 95, 15—80; F. W. Shibley, 85, 14—81; W. J. Knott, 92, 10—82; Col. J. B. Holland, 106, 24—82; Marshall Whitlach, 83, plus 2—85; F. F. Storm, 88, 4—84; C. P. Gildersleeve, 97, 15—82; J. M. Calender, 95, 12—83.

Two-ball foursomes match play against bogie was the competitive event at the St. Andrews's Golf Club yesterday. Archie Reid, champion of the Hudson River Golf Association, and A. B. Holliday proved the successful pair, finishing 2 down to the "Colonel." Both Reid and Holliday received handsome prizes.

Competitions both morning and afternoon were decided at the Englewood Country Club yesterday. During the early hours four-ball handicaps in two classes claimed attention, winners in the Class A division being Arthur Yauch and B. F. Reinmund, with a card of 75—7—68. The Class B winners were A. W. Gilmore and C. M. Sprague, with 87—12—75. H. V. Keep won the special eighteen-hole medal play handicap, his card reading 85—12—73. There were 100 members on the course.

KNOCKOUTS AT LONG ACRE.

Jim Holland of England Goes Down After Three Rounds—Goldman Wins.

The Thanksgiving crowd that withessed the special programme of boxing offered by Manager Newman at the Long Acre A. A. last night went home satisfied to a man, as every one of the bouts scheduled furnished the kind of sport they relished, several of the contests ending in knockouts. A double wind-up of ten rounds each was the feature attraction, but neither of the bouts went the scheduled ten rounds.

Jim Holland of England was the opponent of "Kid" Gleason in the semi-final of ten rounds, and in view of the fact that the contest only went three rounds, the Englishman being knocked out, it pleased the crowd, as the Englishman used questionable tactics. The Quaker was cool and waited for the chance that presented itself in the third round, when Gleason sent over a hard right to the jaw that sent the Englishman down for the count, and he was later carried to his corner in a dazed condition. The final number of the evening was a slashing good bout, but only went one round longer than the preceding one. Young Goldman was pitted against Dave Dillon of Jersey City, who outweighed his opponent and also had the advantage of height and reach. Goldman refused to be stopped, although given a hard fight by Dillon. Dillon scored often with a hard left jab that worried the little man until he finally got over a hard right and left on the face and wind that put Dillon out.

Several other good bouts preceded the final numbers, all of which were fast. Young Brown and Jack Ladberry put up a slashing good bout for six rounds in which Brown was the aggressor and won handily.

Dixie Kid Gets a Whipping.

WATERBURY, Conn., Nov. 24.—In a bout that was to have gone fifteen rounds to-night the referee stopped a contest between Dixie Kid and Frank Mantil just as the gong rang at the end of the fifth round. The affair was so one-sided that the house popularly shouted that the fight be stopped and Mantell given the decision.

PENNINGTON ATHLETICS.

PENNINGTON, N. J., Nov. 24.—The members of the seminary football team held a meeting to-day, and elected Nat Duffy of Buffalo, N. Y., Captain of the team for next year. He was recently chosen as President of the Athletic Association and is also Captain of the basket ball team which will open the season on Dec. 16. Immediately after the election the following were declared eligible to wear the school letter: Bills, Hart, Smith, Conroy, Haines, Duffy, Baldwin, Bothe, Crammar, Davies, Holmes, Weymer, and Leutze.

The record of the 'Varsity bootball team for the season just closed was creditable, but not so encouraging as in the past few years, the goal line having been crossed twice, once by the Plainfield H. S., and again by Perkiomen, when Pennington was shut out. The complete record follows: Pennington 22, Princeton H. S. 0; Pennington 0, Blair Hall Academy 0; Pennington 52, Plainfield H. S. 6; Pennington 2, Villanova Prep. 0; Pennington 0, Perkiomen 17; Pennington 15, Bordentown M. I. 0.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—In a game of sensational plays Georgetown defeated Lehigh this afternoon by 6 to 3. Price of Lehigh, scored a goal from the field from Georgetown's twenty-five-yard line, after Dunn had run fifty-five yards with a clear field, being overtaken by Carter, Georgetown's fleet end. Costello of Georgetown, a few minutes later, ran fifty-five yards for a touchdown, having caught the ball on a punt out by Lehigh from the twenty-five-yard line following an unsuccessful attempt by Georgetown for a goal from the field. Wymark kicked the goal from the touchdown, and there was no further scoring.

Pool at the Union Academy.

In the pool tourney at the Union Billiard Academy last night George Clark of Brooklyn defeated James Ryan, Glens Falls, by 150 to 122. The respective high runs were 15 and 30. Sixty-one innings were required.

SCHOOLBOYS' TITLE GOES TO ERASMUS

A fumble on the kick-off by Kleinert of Poly Prep at Poly's fifteen-yard line, two line plunges by Erasmus, and then a beautifully executed forward pass, Gamble to Jamer, gave Erasmus High School a victory over their old rivals in their annual gridiron struggle at Washington Park, Brooklyn, yesterday. It all happened within forty-five seconds, and the two teams then settled down to a futile battle for another touchdown. The victory practically settles the interscholastic football championship, as Erasmus has won eight of her nine games. Boys' High, the only team to defeat Erasmus, has made such a poor record during the season that the eleven can hardly be considered. A crowd which numbered close to 5,000 saw yesterday's game.

Erasmus won in the first minute of play. Kleinert missed Gallagher's kick-off at his own 15-yard line and Erasmus got the ball. McKinney could not gain, Gallagher got only three yards, and with seven yards to make on the final attempt a forward pass was tried. Gamble shot the ball straight into Jamer's waiting arms and he stepped over the line for a touchdown. Gamble kicked out to the 25-yard line and Byrne missed the try for goal. During the remainder of the period Poly outplayed Erasmus and the ball was kept in Erasmus territory all the time. There was considerable punting, in which Gallagher outclassed Cendoya and Harmon, but this advantage was evened up by the fast work of the Poly Prep ends, who generally got the Erasmus runners in their tracks.

The second period was marked by many penalties, Erasmus offending much more than Poly in this respect. The playing was in Erasmus territory all the time, but generally between the 30-yard line and midfield. In the third period Erasmus stated off as if to get another touchdown, but after rushing the ball well into Poly's territory could not gain consistently. This period was replete with fumbles and ill-directed forward passes and both teams punted often without either seriously threatening the other's goal line.

In the final period Erasmus completely outplayed Poly. Starting from her own 40-yard line a minute after play began Erasmus rushed the ball to Poly's 8-yard line in successive line bucks. Here Poly held and took the ball on downs. In the last few minutes of play both teams played a punting game, with the ball generally nearer midfield than either goal line. The line-up:

Erasmus.	Position.	Poly Prep.
Felter	centre	Lane
McGee	right guard	Norris
Praeder	right tackle	Kennedy
Balcom	right end	Gleason
Gamble	quarterback	J. Gallagher
Gallagher	fullback	Kleinert

Touchdown—Jamer. Referee—Mr. Foltz, Brown. Umpire—E. Murphy, Brown. Field Judge—Mr. Fauver, Oberlin. Head Linesman—Mr. Valentine, N. Y. U. Substitutes—Kleisert for Kennedy, Nostrand for Kleinert, Reimers for McKinney, Goodman for Longman, McGath for Sperry, Kennedy for Kleinert. Time of periods—Twelve and thirteen minutes.

LOCKWOOD'S SHOOTING BEST

Captures Thanksgiving Day Cup in Crescent A. C. Competition.

Under almost perfect conditions the trapshooters of the Crescent Athletic Club turned out in force yesterday and made some excellent scores on their grounds at Bay Ridge. Six contests were decided, and in all but one of them full scores were made. In one sweepstakes shoot five of the gunners broke all their targets. The attendance was the best of the season, including two guests—J. A. R. Elliott and Dr. A. F. Griffith, both of whom did excellent work.

The feature was the contest for the Thanksgiving Cup. It was at fifty targets in strings of twenty-five for each man. Fifteen competed and C. A. Lockwood won after a shoot-off with L. C. Hopkins. Both men broke their fifty targets in the first instance and Lockwood broke all of his twenty-five in the shoot-off.

Fourteen entered for the sweepstakes at twenty-five targets, in which F. B. Stephenson, shooting from scratch, was the winner, breaking all twenty-five. The others, whose scores with their handicaps showed twenty-five broken, were: C. A. Lockwood, George R. Meeker, and L. C. Hopkins. A. F. Griffith, a guest, shot from scratch and broke twenty-five. The leg for the stake trophy was won by C. A. Lockwood with a full score of twenty-five, and F. B. Stephenson was the runner-up with a clean twenty-four to his credit.

C. A. Lockwood and H. W. Dreyer tied with full scores in a trophy match, in which twelve competed, and in another trophy match, where ten contested for the prize, C. R. James and C. A. Lockwood tied with twenty-four each and divided the prize. Although J. A. R. Elliott was high gun in another trophy match with twenty-five broken from scratch, he being a guest the prize went to Capt. H. W. Dreyer.

SHRUBB BEATS LONGBOAT.

BOSTON, Nov. 24.—Alfred Shrubb, the English champion professional distance runner, to-night defeated Tom Longboat, the Onondaga Indian, in a fifteen-mile race in Mechanics Hall by three-quarters of a lap. Shrubb's time was 1 hour 26 minutes 8 3-5 seconds.

Legislation for Sportsmen.

John H. Hendrickson of Jamaica, President of the New York State Sportsmen's Association, has called a meeting of the association to be held at Syracuse on Saturday, Dec. 10. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss radical legislation for the benefit of sportsmen, including the abolition of the present Forest, Fish, and Game Commission as at present constituted, and the separation of the varied interests into distinct departments or commissions. President Hendrickson declares that of the hundreds of thousands of dollars turned into the State Treasury from the gunners' license fees not one penny has been spent for the benefit of gunners, while much has been spent for the benefit of fishermen, upon whose rods there is exacted no license fee.

"The fees received from gunning licenses should be directly used for the protection of game and the restocking of sections from which game has disappeared or is disappearing," says Mr. Hendrickson. "Not a penny of the gunners' license money should be spent for restocking streams with fish. Instead, there should be a rod license fee for fresh-water fishing, and the money thus obtained should be spent in the interests of the fishermen. Radical legislation is needed for the preservation of woodland. People are beginning to recognize this as related to the water supply, but it is needed for the preservation of game as well."

$11,000 FOR STALLION THE BONDSMAN

The Old Glory Horse sale, which is being held all this week at Madison Square Garden, reached its top mark yesterday, when practically all the noted horses on the auction list went under the hammer. The crowds at both sessions were easily the best of the week, and the bidding was far more spirited than before. The high price of the sale was reached during the afternoon, when The Bondsman, the celebrated sire of Colorado E., The Plunger, Grace Bond, and other noted steppers, was sold at $11,000 to Dick Wilson, acting for Capt. R. P. McCann of Portland, Ore. It had been generally predicted that this noted son of Baron Wilkes would bring at least $15,000, and figures as high as $20,000 had been named by close followers of the game. The bidding showed only four men who cared to name a price, and three of the quartet dropped out after $10,000 was reached. As there are no big stars to be sold during the two remaining days of the sale, it is a certainty that the price paid for The Bondsman will be the record for this year's sale. Other high prices yesterday were $6,500 for Silent Brigade, $5,725 for Belvasia, and $4,900 for Eva Tanguay.

The receipts of the day were far in advance of those of any previous day, and totaled more than two-thirds of the entire receipts for the three previous days of the sale. A total of 127 head was disposed of during the two sessions yesterday and the receipts aggregated $99,590, an average price of $786 per head. The total receipts for the three days of the sale are $243,015 for 522 head, an average price for the four days of $466. This figure is likely to be considerably reduced during the two remaining days of the sale.

Tales of Men and Ghosts

By Edith Wharton

Says the New York Sun:—

"Never before has she shown such sureness in execution. It is a remarkable collection of stories which the reader of culture will enjoy, for in the flood of modern books, even good ones, literary quality such as Mrs. Wharton's shows is almost unknown."

Says the New York Globe:—

"You will go far before you will find a better ghost story than 'The Eyes.' Here is the horror of Poe and the psychological mystery told with the same terrible lucidity and classical purity of language."

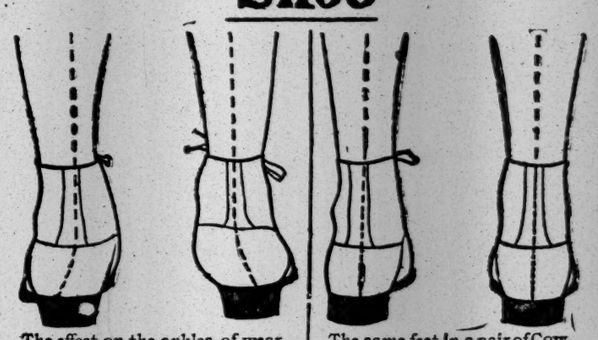
The

Coward Shoe



The effect on the ankles of wearing shoes that DO NOT support the arch.

For Boys Whose Ankles Turn In

This condition comes from a weakened arch, which causes the ankle to sag, and turn, on any extra exertion.

Support for the arch and ankle muscles is provided by the COWARD ARCH PROP SHOE. Its correct anatomical construction, eases the tension on over-strained muscles and holds the arch structure in a normal and restful position.

Growing feet, with a tendency to weak ankles need the benefit and protection of the COWARD ARCH PROP SHOE, made with the Coward Extension Heel.

Coward Arch Prop Shoe and Coward Extension Heel, have been made by James S. Coward, in his Custom Department, for over 30 years.

PUBLIC OR PRIVATE FUNDS?

If 6 per cent. be taken as a fair interest for private funds, and 4 per cent. for public funds, it is plain that there is a difference of 2 per cent. annually, or say 100 per cent., reckoning for the maturity of a fifty-year bond. It has been thought that this obvious consideration settled the preference of the use of public funds for public works in suitable cases, but lately there have appeared dissentients in surprising quarters. Both official and editorial commentators are arguing that all public funds should be given to the Triborough route, and that the Interborough extensions should in no case be helped from the loan of public credit in the manner already so familiar.

This is something apart from the wrangle over routes and operators, and can be argued upon its own merits. Why, it may be asked, should even those who hate the Interborough punish the city for the faults of the Interborough? For nothing is clearer than that the denial of the use of public funds to the Interborough is a punishment of the city itself. The Interborough road is the city's property, and it is to the city's interest that all additions to it shall be made as cheaply as possible. From no evident point of view can it be disadvantageous to the Interborough to compel it to disburse funds which the city or the farepayers must ultimately reimburse. If the city's credit is used the interest charge is thereby reduced, with the effect of lessening the price payable in the event of purchase by the city, or of reducing the period of amortization which must expire before the city can take title to its property free of the mortgage upon it. Nothing would suit the Interborough better than that its extensions should not be taken over by the city, or that its operating contract should be lengthened in proportion fixed by the use of private funds. It is the city which pays. It is the Interborough which profits. It is an odd position for the enemies of the Interborough to take, unless they are to be reckoned also opposed to the interests of the city.

There is another reason why the Interborough should have preference if the public credit is to be loaned for subway construction. The existing subway bonds are self-supporting, and are exempt from the debt limit. Their existence in no degree hinders the issue of other bonds under the debt limit. The same would be true of any new bonds issued by the Interborough. They would be issued in aid of a going concern of such high solvency that its contract of operation is a guarantee also that the bonds are self-supporting. The city's bonds in aid of the Interborough, therefore, would not prevent the use of the city's credit in aid of the many other necessary purposes to which the Mayor referred yesterday. It would be otherwise regarding bonds issued in aid of, let us say, the subway proposal of Mr. McAdoo. He does not guarantee that these bonds shall be self-supporting, principal and interest. He expresses a competent opinion that they will be, but asks preference for the capital which is advanced by anybody in his behalf. Bonds of this nature, however excellent, are not within the constitutional exemption. To whatever extent bonds are issued in aid of Mr. McAdoo's proposal the city must deny itself the expenditure of like sums for other uses.

Besides, limitation of subway construction to the funds of the city as they may become available is a snail-like process compared to the issuance of exempt bonds. In the former case the city would anticipate the future in the manner of the spendthrift who anticipates the future to ease the present, ignoring future demands which are even more certain to arise than the anticipated funds are to accrue. The assistance of the Interborough with exempt bonds is as near to eating your cake and having it as is possible. The denial of public funds to the Interborough is punishment of the city for an unreasoning passion.

SENATOR GRADY.

The self-denial of Senator Grady in refraining from pressing his claims to the leadership of the State Senate will be an obvious service to his party. The claims, by the rule of ordinary political precedence, were strong; the objection to recognize them was still stronger and more obvious.

Mr. Grady embodies and represents an element in the Democratic Party the influence of which in the past has been hurtful to an extreme degree, not only to the public, but to the party. Essentially it has been disloyal to the party and constantly betrayed it for selfish interests and only too often for greedy and corrupt interests. It has been inconsistent with party discipline, since it was always open to deals with party opponents and a great hindrance to party efficiency because it alienated, when it did not drive out, the best men in the electorate. This element, which is particularly conspicuous in the person of Mr. Grady, has been potent in the Tammany organization, and its true character cannot be ignored in the present situation. That situation is promising if it be treated rightly. It does not require that Tammany be ignored. It would be impracticable and unfair to try to ignore it. But it is essential that the recognition of Tammany be conditioned as far as possible on the reasonableness of its demands or desires. Tammany is entitled to all the consideration due to its political strength when properly and loyally used for the real good of the party, and no more. This substantially seems to be the principle on which the case of Mr. Grady has been settled, and it is of good omen.

MR. CARNEGIE AT 75.

When Andrew Carnegie in 1902 transferred the endowment fund of $10,000,000 to the Board of Trustees of the Carnegie Institution at Washington, he declared it to be his purpose to found an institution which, "with the co-operation of institutions now or hereafter established, there or elsewhere, shall in the broadest and most liberal manner encourage investigation, research, and discovery, show the application of knowledge to the improvement of mankind, and provide such buildings, laboratories, books, and apparatus as may be needed." In this declaration of purpose Mr. Carnegie clearly formulated the principle that has guided him in the distribution of his great fortune, and announced a purpose common to his chief benefactions. The "improvement of mankind," the taking of measures that shall place men and nations a little higher from age to age, that shall make them happier, worthier, nobler—in a word, progress—that was Mr. Carnegie's aim. With this thought and this aim all his giving has been in full harmony. The Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, providing retiring allowances for professors and teachers in universities, colleges, and technical schools, was intended to serve the cause of higher education "by advancing and dignifying the profession of teacher." The Carnegie libraries all over the land, diffusing knowledge and imparting a taste for reading, through which knowledge readily comes, have been most wisely planned to serve the end their founder has steadily kept in view, "the improvement of mankind."

With the ardor of full conviction, Mr. Carnegie has with tongue and pen and purse striven to promote permanent peace among nations. That is a purpose not merely congruous with the intent of his generous benefactions, it is identically the same. The old romantic notion that war ennobles the spirit of man has been abandoned for the truer perception that by wars neither men nor nations advance toward the worthier state that is the sane, the rational, and the attainable ideal of philanthropy. The world's greatest forward steps in knowledge have not been taken in time of war.

If to-day, his seventy-fifth birthday, Mr. Carnegie is moved to take account of the means and methods by which he has sought to contribute to "the improvement of mankind," and to re-examine the principles that have guided him in that endeavor, we are confident that he will find his broad plans to stand in no need of revision or change. They were wise from the beginning. Who that seeks the betterment of mankind, which inevitably means the progress of mankind, can forge or apply an instrument more effective to that end than knowledge? It would be idle to insist upon the point, since it is axiomatic that all human progress is and must be through knowledge, through the intellect. Moral truth, without which progress would be but a futility and a bitterness, is in its nature unchanging. The right and the wrong of remote past ages are the right and the wrong of to-day. Nor can our perceptions of moral truth change in the future. But our perceptions of the external world change from year to year, almost from day to day, as investigation, research and discovery correct our vision and broaden the field of our mastery. Thus speculative error yields to demonstrated truth, and the ever augmenting sum of human knowledge attests the foundation fact of all progress, the truth that knowledge is cumulative. That makes the difference between the living and the dying nations, between the burnt-out nations that have lost the power to put one thought atop of another and the nations aglow with vitality that are continually pushing back the boundaries of knowledge.

As he contemplates his work upon an anniversary that every man, when he attains to it, must consider appropriate for a review of things done, Mr. Carnegie will find reason, we think, not merely for a surface complacency, but for a deep inward conviction that he has done well, done wisely, done much. Not alone in giving away his riches, but in the acquisition of them, he may feel, he has the right to feel, that he has blessed his fellow-men. It is a priceless service to mankind to show, as he has shown, that in the making of a career so much depends upon what is in the boy and the man, so little upon outside conditions. This Scotch lad with nothing at all, and in a country new and strange to him, knew how to put the bridle upon opportunity and to drive her with a hand so skilled and compelling that now, at 75, he is one of the world's richest men, a man known all over the face of the globe for the fortune he has made and for the good he has done with it.

The example is one that all mankind may study with profit and follow with advantage, so far as it may be followed. In building up his own fortune Mr. Carnegie built up the fortunes of many other men, men chosen with rare good judgment to be his business associates. His genius and their genius have developed in a very extraordinary way one of the greatest industrial arts, an art upon which so great a part of man's industries depend that to have kept it in a backward state would have sensibly diminished the world's rate of progress. And now, with all these achievements and these distinctions to his credit, with the reputation he has won for wisdom and for large beneficence, with the inward feeling, no doubt dearer to him than all the rest, that he has done well so many good things, Mr. Carnegie at 75, in good health, in the best of spirits, entering with lightness of heart and keen zest into the social pleasures that in their time and their way relieve the seriousness of life, still finds his chief joy in contributing from his store of wisdom and of wealth to "the improvement of mankind." May his interest in good works and his deserved contentment of mind never grow less!

THE SITUATION IN MEXICO.

The general belief all over the civilized world is that President Diaz will suppress the rebellion, or series of little rebellions, in his country, and restore order; and the general opinion is that the crushing of the rebels—they are scarcely to be called revolutionists—will be for the ultimate good of Mexico. Although there have been riots in various parts of the republic, as far south as Orizaba, as far north as the neighborhood of the Rio Grande border, and unverified reports of many more, there is still no proof of concerted action and a prearranged plan of revolution. In spite of the disposition of some of the American newspapers to take Francisco I. Madero at something like his own estimate of his importance, he is a very weak man for a revolutionary leader. Though arrests have lately been made in Mexico City of men having upon their persons commissions signed by him as President of the republic, he has widely published a statement that he is not President, (even from the Madero point of view,) and does not intend to claim that office. This strange contradiction is in keeping with all the reports we receive (most of them originate on the border) of the strife in Mexico and the plans of the rebels.

Many liberties have been taken with the name of Gen. Bernardo Reyes, a brave soldier, a man of great executive talent. In a single column we read that he is to be made Secretary of War next Thursday, to succeed Don Enrique Creel, who is to be appointed Secretary of the Treasury in place of Don Jose Y. Limantour, who is in Europe and "will not return"; that Reyes has taken command of the revolutionists in the north; that he is on the ocean and will soon land at Tampico, when all the Mexican army will support him. These conflicting tales are supplemented by a pitiful account of the ill-treatment to which Bernardo has been subjected by Porfirio. The worst of these relates to the Diaz bodyguard which accompanies him everywhere he goes in Europe and reports his every action to the Mexican Government. Anybody who will believe that a man of the character of Gen. Reyes would submit to such a Meilhac and Halevy espionage in a foreign country, when he could rid himself of it by appealing to the police, may be accounted a ready believer in any yarns sent out by Madero and his followers.

The name of Limantour has also been absurdly juggled with in the contradictory dispatches. Almost in the same breath he is to be forced out of the Cabinet, he is to be relied upon to use his influence to restore order, he is to figure as one of the heads of the revolution. The statement, often made in Mexico in the last six months, that he has remained so long in Europe for the purpose of raising a new loan for his Government, is now gravely repeated. New international loans are not generally secured with secrecy, and if secrecy should be thought necessary is it likely that the Financial Secretary of a country would personally go abroad for that purpose when it might better be accomplished through agents? Señor Limantour's long absence from home has caused much comment, but his own explanation, that his wife has been seriously ill and required medical treatment she could only get in Europe, is better than any advanced by the malcontents and ordinary gossips. Of course, neither Reyes nor Limantour is concerned in any way in these uprisings. Gen. Reyes says so, for his part, in an interview published this morning.

Alarming statements of havoc caused by revolutionists in three large cities, Puebla, Orizaba, and Torreon, are now known to have been greatly exaggerated. Since the petty anti-American demonstration in Guadalajara that city has been peaceful, and so has the capital. It may be that Government censorship has suppressed some news, but as lately as Friday of last week there was no censorship. The preparations for the inauguration of President Diaz next Thursday were then well advanced. Thirty thousand electric lamps were strung in the Alameda to illuminate the fiestas. These may be, as reported yesterday, somewhat curtailed, but Diaz generaly sticks to his programme.

The disposition of the rebel press agents is to speak well of Diaz. The object of the attack, it is said, is not the President but the groupo, that circle of the friends of Diaz which includes his chief Ministers and a number of prominent Mexicans who hold no offices. But Diaz is the guiding spirit. It has been said that if he suppresses these outbreaks he will owe his success to the railroads, which did not exist in the old revolutionary era. But it must not be forgotten that Diaz has inspired and encouraged the building of the railroads, not to have means to crush rebels but to develop his country. The industrial growth of Mexico, which has concentrated large bodies of workingmen at many points is, on the other hand, described as a justification of apprehension at present, for workingmen are frequently discontented. But the great industrial development of the republic has been largely the work of Diaz, and Mexicans know well that his influence, wisely exerted, has transformed thousands of miserable peons into competent and well-paid artisans.

In considering the trouble in our sister republic, also, it is well to take in account the heroic repute of Porfirio Diaz, the glamour surrounding his name. In his early life D'Artagnan himself was not more of a romantic hero. He fought for a whole year, day by day, with an unhealed wound which kept him in agony. He rose from a bed of fever to lead a cavalry charge. His escape from Bazaine's guards in the Jesuit monastery at Puebla, in 1865, and his defeat of the whole regiment sent in pursuit, a few days later, with a force of nondescripts recruited in the mountain roads, were as splendid as any imagining by Dumas. He had captured Puebla before Maximilian fairly knew that he was at large, and he marched thence to meet the army sent to recaptufe the city, overwhelmed it, and proceeded to take the capital. A brave, audacious soldier, a man of the people who raised himself to the highest place by his own exertions, a man of great destructive force, to be sure, but of constructive genius as well, Diaz should not be regarded as unpopular. The assurance of Secretary Creel, telegraphed from Mexico Wednesday night, that the Government has the disturbances well in hand, is supplemented by further assurances this morning from the publisher of The Mexican Herald, which has its own correspondents in all parts of the republic.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

White Men and The Tropics.

President Taft, having been in the Canal Zone five times and given intelligent as well as careful study to conditions of life as he found them there, has full appreciation for the wonderful work of the American sanitariums. He doesn't share, however, the foolish illusion that Panama has been made a place of residence as safe and healthy for white men as a well-regulated northern city. Statements to that effect follow the appearance of each of Col. Gorgas's monthly reports, but they are written by people who consider only the death rate.

That rate does, indeed, make a fine showing—for the tropics—and we have the best of rights to be proud of it and of the men whose skill and devotion have brought the figure down so low, but accurate conclusions can be drawn from it only when due account has been taken of these, among other facts: The canal population is composed almost entirely of men in the prime of life, who would have practically no death rate if they were at home; they all go north for long vacations at frequent intervals; the majority of them, when taken seriously ill, quit the Isthmus for good, and if they die, as they frequently do, the record is made elsewhere than in the canal reports.

Moreover, the President knows that even when yellow fever and malaria are banished the tropics do not become permanently and safely habitable by the white man, particularly if he has to do hard work. As President Taft put it in justifying the high wages paid to the canal staff and the successful efforts to reduce their cost of living, "work in the tropics is attended with a nervous strain, a loss of nervous strength, and a recurring period of despondency, that cause men to go where they get much less pay, but can breathe the air of the temperate zone." That is a lay description of tropic neurasthenia, but correct as far as it goes, and if the President had understood the malady in the past as well as he does now, his memorable denunciation of a certain engineer who resigned, obviously because his nerves were thus shattered, would have been softened into sympathy.

Only brown men and black ones can really live in the tropics. The white man can rule there, but if he stays too long he invariably either dies or degenerates

Amateurs as Teachers.

It is easy enough to understand the irritation felt by the veteran railway men whom Mr. Brandeis has accused of running their roads inefficiently and extravagantly. They think it absurd, naturally enough, that a lawyer should assume to teach them their business, and so it is, in a way, but when they sarcastically offer him any salary he may ask if he will show them how their railroading can be improved they make a double error.

In the first place, whatever his abilities as a reformer of railway management might be, failure to convince the railway managers of their own incompetence would deprive him, under their offer as formulated, of an opportunity to show his powers. He might well quail before this larger task, though ready enough to undertake the other. In the second place, the assumption that the outsider, the amateur with a theory, cannot teach the man of long and successful practice is contradicted innumerable times in the history of every art, profession, and trade.

The practical man is too busy doing his work to try experiments, and he has a horror of uncertainties. The amateur, with more of leisure, can stop to think, can risk failure after failure, and can learn from every one of them until at last he hits upon the better scheme. Hardly one of the great inventors could have done the work of the men whose efficiency his machine increased, and hardly one of them became a real expert in the utilization of his device. The professional is by temperament and habit slow to recognize changes in conditions, and his worst fault is a tendency to resent suggestion and criticism. In the end, however, he always yields, but after he has been forced out of one rut he is restless and uncomfortable until he can get into another.

Of course not all amateurs are competent teachers, but upon them as a class we are very largely dependent for progress and reform, and to what the practical man calls their impudence the world is enormously indebted. It is proverbial that onlookers see more of a game than do the players, and a mistake is none the less a mistake because only they have seen it.

New Police Methods to be Tested.

One highly mysterious murder and two cases of kidnapping have given Deputy Commissioner Flynn an early opportunity to demonstrate the superiority of his methods of detecting crime over those of his predecessors. As far the murder, no very novel system of procedure has yet been developed, nor is it easy to see what advantage there is in not utilizing to the fullest extent the assistance which the newspapers have so often provided in the way of gathering information from widely scattered sources.

The stealing of children is a different matter, and the fact that the police have hitherto usually made complete failures in dealing with this hideous crime renders almost any change of plan a hopeful one. The new scheme cannot have worse results than did the old one, and it may have better. The parents whose children are missing seem to be doing exactly what we have all so often advised—they have promptly told the facts to the police and are following with docility the instructions which the police have issued.

If Deputy Commissioner Flynn succeeds in catching and convicting the blackmailers who resort to this abominable device for enforcing their demands, he will deserve and receive the gratitude of the whole community. Child-stealing is an intolerable crime. To demand that it be made a capital offense is the first impulse, but the old confidence in the deterrent effect of death penalties is now much weakened in all thinking people, and the real need is for the prevention of kidnapping rather than for its savage punishment.

This morning, in reading your report of yesterday's development in the Lewis trunk mystery, my attention was drawn to the wording of the sentence in Mrs. Kenny's narrative, in which she was represented as saying that Callier "seemed to be cultured." The more so, because last evening, in reading the first installment of Robert Chambers's new serial, "The Common Law," he makes his hero in speaking of Valorie's mother say: "She must have been extremely cultivated," and, again, a few sentences later, Valorie says: "It was an intense desire to be among cultivated people," &c.

I am not a purist, and I do not think I am pedantic, but this use of the word "cultivated" for "cultured" has always grated on my sensibilities. Upon looking up the former word in the Century Dictionary I find this particular use of the word well authenticated, and upon such good authority as that of Lowell, who, in his Harvard oration of 1886, said: "In proportion as there are more thoroughly cultivated persons in a community will the finer uses of prosperity be taught, and the vulgar uses of it become disreputable." That ought to be final and persuasive enough, but the logical difficulty still lingers in my mind that plants and things and arts and virtues, and even vices, can be cultivated, and persons can be "cultivated" for particular purposes, but when one speaks of persons of education and culture and refinement, it seems to me they should be spoken of as "cultured," and the studies and interests by which they became cultured as the things they have "cultivated."

Part Time for All Pupils.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the face of a staggering annual expenditure for education, if it be education at all, judging by results, the authorities are confronted with the "part-time" problem as badly as ever. At first orators on the subject grew warm as they dilated on the child deprived of its right to a full day's schooling, and called for more and still more millions to build palaces for the children of the people.

In truth, the very prodigality of educational opportunity has produced an artificial demand for it, and "part time" will continue as long as all creation tries to crowd into congested cities to be elevated by "education," meaning thereby to learn to get a living by other than hard work, and in part at least at the expense of the State.

Question: Why should any public education be given to any pupils for more than half a day, with the other half devoted to play, till the age of 12 or so, and to work after that age? There's the solution of "part time"—put all on it. ROBERT P. GREEN.

From the School Report.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the much-quoted eleventh School Report, of which I have secured a copy, I am puzzled by an item on Page 128. It appears that there were 145,066 cases of pediculosis, that 683,980 treatments were given, and that some 3,000 were excluded from school. The disease is listed under "Communicable Eye and Skin Diseases." At first one might suppose the disease affected the feet—perhaps it does—but is it likely that such a record is accurate, or anything like accurate? JUNIUS II.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This morning I had to answer an inquiry from the Young Women's Christian Association, and when I began my letter and came to the salutation I was "stumped" as to the proper term to use. Ordinarily, I suppose, "My Dear Sirs" will do for most any firm, but, where not only the name but the known constituency of the firm or association is feminine, such a designation would be palpable, if not an insulting blunder, especially in these days of tender sensitiveness regarding women's rights. My dictionary indicated no plural form for "madam." I do not remember ever having seen "My Dear Madams," and it sounded too incorrect to my ear for written use. So I wrote, "My Dear Mesdames," and felt that it looked foolish. What is the correct usage, grammatically and in business etiquette? INQUIRER.

Flags for the Boy Scouts

There is to be a presentation of flags at the Thirteenth Regiment Armory tomorrow night at 8 o'clock to the Boy Scouts of America, the American Boy Scouts, and to the Boys' Brigade. Borough President Steers is to make the presentation speech and Abraham & Straus will give the flags. Later there will be a review and drill by crack troops of the brigade by the Boy Scouts.

SAGE MODEL TOWN NAMED.

The name of the new suburban town on Long Island which is being prepared for city dwellers under the auspices of the Russell Sage Foundation will be Forest Hills Gardens, according to an announcement made yesterday by Robert W. de Forest, Vice President of the foundation. A tract of 142 acres was acquired more than a year ago at the Forest Hills station, near Jamaica, which is just nine miles from the new Pennsylvania station at Seventh Avenue and Thirty-third Street. Streets are now being graded and home sites mapped out, and Mr. de Forest said yesterday that the new settlement will be ready for building operations early in the new year.

The landscape and architectural plan will follow the English type. Frederick Law Olmsted, as the landscape architect, has laid out two eighty-foot streets a quarter of a mile apart and a boulevard 125 feet wide fronting Forest Park, the largest public park in Queens. Straight lines have been avoided as far as possible, particularly in the localities which will be chiefly devoted to homes. While not fantastically crooked, the streets will not be absolutely straight for long stretches, and will be narrow to permit additional space for the development of the front garden.

Mr. de Forest emphasizes the fact that there is nothing charitable in the providing of a comfortable residential place for present flat dwellers in the Russell Sage Foundation town. The town is to be run on the same business principles as any other suburban locality so far as the purchase of land is concerned, but the owner and dweller will reap the advantages of living in a cheerful community laid out to afford equal benefits to all.

"Mrs. Russell Sage and the Trustees of the foundation," said Mr. de Forest, "have been profoundly impressed with the need of better and more attractive facilities in the suburbs for persons of modest means, those who could put $25 a month and upward in the purchase of a home. They believe that homes can be supplied similar to those in the garden cities of England, with greenery and flowers around them, accessible playgrounds and recreation facilities, and at no appreciably greater cost than is now paid for the same roof-room in the city. They believe, too, that buildings of tasteful design, constructed of brick, cement, or other permanent material, even though of somewhat greater initial cost, are more economical in durability and lesser repair bills than the cheaper structures which are too often the type of New York's outlying districts.

"If these expectations can be realized at Forest Hills Gardens, the Sage Foundation will provide healthful and attractive homes to many people. It will demonstrate that more tasteful surroundings and open spaces pay in suburban development, and thereby encourage imitation. It will encourage economical methods of marketing land."

POLISH FOR CHICAGO PUPILS.

Education Board Adds the Language to High School Curriculum.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—The Polish language is to be added to the curriculum of the Chicago public high schools, an innovation by the Board of Education yesterday already marked a victory for the Polish National Alliance. For a long time the latter has sought to have the language taught in the schools.

The committee also took steps to eliminate all foreign languages from the elementary schools to simplify the grammar school curriculum. Latin has already been dropped. The elimination of German is now proposed.

The Irish Language Revival.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Language revivals, so fashionable during the last fifty years, are an interesting evidence of the struggle made against national extinction in various European countries. The latest, and, indeed, the most flourishing, is the Irish language revival.

The success of the Irish in this direction is due to the intrinsic merits of their language which, as an educational weapon, is scarcely excelled by Greek, and, also, the thunderings of Anglicization have not yet reconciled Irishmen to the English language.

When the Gaelic League started its work of propagating Irish there was scarcely a book printed in the Irish language, but the movement has become so popular in Ireland that now Irish publications far exceed those in English.

Twelve short years ago 250,000 people knew how to speak Irish and a very few knew how to write it. To-day both classes know how to speak and to write in their native language.

By means of traveling teachers, subsidized by voluntary subscription, the Gaelic League has reached a large portion of the people and, by use of the most modern methods of language teaching, Irish is again taking its place as the national language.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It was with great satisfaction that I recently learned that there are two papers in this city that refused the Burr Brothers advertisements. I inquired of a newspaper man whether there were any of the papers here that would not accept such transparently fraudulent advertisements. He answered that he could mention two—The Times and The Post. He also agreed with me in holding that papers that take such advertising are in a certain sense more culpable than the swindlers themselves. It really seems as though the proprietors of such sheets, taking no risk and sharing the plunder, must be devoid of all conscience. In the case of the Burr Brothers none of the papers aiding them could plead ignorance, for during several years they have been openly denounced by The Financial World. I congratulate The Times on its having refused the Burr Brothers' money. It seems sad that its action in so doing should be in contrast with that of other leading papers in this city. W. C. CAMERON.

Advertising and Swindlers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One thing that would help New York to clear itself of such enterprises as Burr Brothers would be laws to properly punish certain New York newspapers for printing advertisements that any man with even the sense of a last year's bird's nest knows are advertisements of swindlers. It is a legal principle that "the receiver is as bad as the thief." It ought to be applied to these papers to the final exclusion of fraud advertisements from oil stock, "sure to go from 12 cents to 20 next Tuesday," to the contemptible "past, present, and future for 50 cents" clairvoyant stuff. Crime and Punishment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reference to the letter in to-day's Times comparing the number of criminals in this country with those in England, signed by "An Englishman," I wonder why this gentleman thinks that the scoundrel Wolter has been "railroaded" or unfairly dealt with, which I suppose is the idea he means to convey.

As to the comparison made, would say that I think the law does in a good many cases deal very unjustly with moneyed criminals, and we have had an instance of a case like this very recently, but I do not see how anybody could say that Wolter has been railroaded or unfairly convicted, as in my opinion a man who is capable of committing such a dastardly deed as he was convicted of should receive the extreme penalty of the law.

PLANS A RIVERSIDE LIKE ROMAN GALLERY

TO COVER OR OUST TRACKS

Long Stretch of Park on the Shore Front to be Used for Memorials of Great Men.

Park Commissioner Stover announced yesterday that plans are on foot to convert Riverside Park, from Seventy-second to 129th Street into an outdoor gallery for commemorating notable Americans by statues and busts of marble and bronze. He said that the adornment of the strip of park which skirts the east bank of the Hudson is only in its infancy, and predicted that before long it would be one of the greatest outdoor galleries in the world, more majestic even than those of Greece and Rome.

The Commissioner also said he had been authorized by the Sinking Fund Commission to take steps looking to the abolition or covering of the New York Central tracks along the western shore line of Manhattan, and that soon Riverside Park will stretch unbroken from the street level to the water's edge.

Mr. Stover's announcement was made in an address at the unveiling ceremony of the Brownson monument in Riverside Park, at the foot of West 104th Street. Archbishop Farley and a large number of Catholic laymen, who were responsible for the erection of the monument, applauded the Commissioner and expressed the hope that his predictions may come true in the near future.

Mr. Stover said that at the request of Mayor Gaynor and the Park Commission he was on hand to accept the monument on behalf of the city and to pledge his word to the founders of the monument that it would be taken care of during the years to come.

"I am not one of those numerous citizens who fear a multiplicity of monuments in public places," said the Commissioner. "There is a sentiment abroad for stripping Central Park of its monuments and statuary. Here on the banks of the Hudson there is a great opportunity for placing collections of statuary and monuments such as those of St. Paul's and of Berlin, and the approach to Westminster Abbey in London.

"It will soon come to pass that no more puffing engines will mar the beauty of this beautiful park. Soon there will be 150 acres of park between Seventy-second and 129th Streets, which will stretch to the very bulkhead line of the river, and along this greensward will be placed a great collection of monuments. Orestes Augustus Brownson, in whose memory this monument has been erected, has the honor of being the first private citizen to have his bust displayed here."

Commissioner Stover went on to say that he thought that in the two blocks between 114th and 116th Streets, which will be occupied as a memorial to Robert Fulton, it would be well to give space to monuments in memory of other great men.

"When we complete this great park it should be something more majestic even than Greece and Rome ever saw; a gallery greater than any which commemorates American greatness. Mr. Carnegie has not gone far enough in bestowing medals to those obscure heroes who perform acts of heroism. The deeds of the common man should be immortalized by busts and statues such as this monument which has been presented to the city today. The municipality is glad, indeed, to take into its care and keeping the memorial to the great American—Orestes Augustus Brownson."

A platform, draped with American flags, had been erected beside the monument, at the crest of the slope which runs from the stone wall of Riverside Drive to the shore line, and on this the men and women participating in the unveiling ceremony sat while the addresses of Commissioner Stover, Archbishop Farley, and others were being made. In front of the platform a throng gathered at 10:30. Some 600 children, pupils of the several Catholics schools, were on hand, each bearing a small American flag. The youngsters were under the leadership of the Rev. Father John J. Keane, who led the singing of patriotic songs.

Many Knights of Columbus in uniform were on hand. Frank S. Gannon, President of the Catholic Club of New York City, presided at the ceremony, and, after the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" by the children, he introduced W. Bourke Cockran, who delivered the oration. Mr. Cockran said that the life of Brownson was an inspiring narrative; that his whole life and character were summarized in the words which appeared on the monument dedicated to his memory—"Philosopher, Publicist, Patriot—He Loved God, Country, and Truth."

At a signal from Mr. Gannon, Mrs. T. H. Odlome, granddaughter of Dr. Brownson, and Mrs. S. J. Kitson, widow of the sculptor who made the monument, pulled a cord and the flags which covered the statue fell away revealing the bust of the man whose memory was being honored.

M. Joseph Harson, Chairman of the National Brownson Memorial Committee, in making the presentation address, said that while the monument in Riverside Park commemorative of those who fell during the war of the rebellion and the monument in memory of Gen. Grant were both war monuments, the Brownson memorial represented not the horrors of war but the victory of peace.

Archbishop Farley said that the occasion should be one of inspiration for the rising generation. He said it was a tribute to one of America's greatest men and the Church's most loyal children.

"He was willing to sacrifice everything in this search for truth," said the Archbishop, "and his life itself was a lasting moral monument."

Brownson was born at Stockbridge, Vt., in 1803, and died at Detroit, Mich., in April, 1876. He was ordained a Universalist minister in 1826, and settled at Ballston, N. Y., but later in life turned to the Catholic Church and became one of its greatest defenders. During his later years he was well known as a forceful writer on subjects relating to the Church and Nation.

Civil War Relic for Columbia.

A valuable relic of the civil war, discovered by B. B. Kendrick, a student, has been added to the library of Columbia University. It is a manuscript copy of the journal of the Reconstruction Committee of the Thirty-ninth Congress, and gives a circumstantial account of those sessions in which the post-bellum policy of the Northern States was threshed out. The manuscript is especially interesting as only one copy of the printed journal is known to exist, which is in the Government Printing Office.

THE TURKEY.

O, Damocles of birds,
With what sublime indifference thou peck'st
Amongst the straw, though thy last sun reflects
Its dying image in the whetted knife
That, in its fall,
End with thy life.

Plumed gladiator that with lordly gait
And ruffled breast
How droops thy crest!
O, gobbler,
Meet food for king and cobbler,
Fate has thee by the heels securely hobbled;
Straightway thou shalt be gobbled,
Thyself;
Ten million flaming altars wait for thee;
Ten million hungry gullets yawn for thee;
Butchered to make a Boston holiday.

The Thanksgiving holiday was celebrated by two performances at the Metropolitan Opera House diametrically opposed in character, and as far from each other in spirit as well could be imagined. In the afternoon a special performance of Wagner's consecrational festival play of "Parsifal" was given. In the evening the opera was Verdi's "Rigoletto." Both were marked by features that made the record of the day notable.

For the seventh season "Parsifal" takes its place in the repertory of the Metropolitan Opera House, not among the regular subscription performances, but as a rare and special representation, given upon occasions suitable for an audience not drawn by the ordinary allurements of the opera house. The arrangements made yesterday afternoon were somewhat different from those of previous years, in that the performance began at 1 o'clock and the intermissions, though longer than those usual at ordinary operatic performances, were not such as they used to be. The audience was a large one, and it was, as "Parsifal" audiences at the Metropolitan have always been, mindful of the exceptional character of the performance and its exceptional significance, and was profoundly attentive throughout.

There was but one important new feature in this representation, the first appearance of Herbert Witherspoon as Gurnemanz. It was an important and significant step in the progress of this American singer, who has made steady progress in the art of the lyric drama since he joined the forces of the Metropolitan Opera House. Mr. Witherspoon's Gurnemanz was admirable in almost all respects, and in more than a few it was the best that has been heard since "Parsifal" was first produced here. He makes it a living and vital figure. His Gurnemanz has a sense of the importance of his office in the brotherhood of the Grail, but he is not oppressed by it and he is not crushed out of the semblance of humanity by it. He is endowed not only with dignity and seriousness, but also with a touch of the saving humor, a touch of the human temper that Wagner put into the character. Mr. Witherspoon sang the part really well, with vocal art, with truth of declamatory expression, and with a German diction that made the words he uttered intelligible.

The Amfortas of Mr. Amato was recognized last season, when it was made known here, as a fine and artistically conceived piece of tragic acting, and he sings the music well. He did so yesterday, although he had appeared the evening before in an exacting part in "La Gioconda." Mme. Fremstad's Kundry remains one of the highest of her many remarkable achievements, and Mr. Burrian's Parsifal is a finely conceived and vitally efficient impersonation. The voice of Titurel was sung by one of the new members of the company, William Hinshaw; it is an excellent voice, with a slight tendency yesterday to unsteadiness. Mr. Hinshaw was also the second Knight of the Grail. Otto Goritz's Klingsor is the single one among the leading parts in the original production of "Parsifal" here that has not been changed; and it is still a splendidly vivid portrayal.

Mr. Hertz conducted, as he always has: the orchestra sounded beautifully rich, sonorous, and well balanced, and to Mr. Hertz is due the credit of keeping the Metropolitan's performance on the high plane upon which he launched it, and out of the ruts of the perfunctory.

The various scenic changes and transformations which have a really important part in the effect of "Parsifal" were well and properly executed, as was the manipulation of the lights. The duet between Kundry and Parsifal in the second act was seriously marred at its point of greatest intensity by the falling of what is technically termed a "fly bridge," a movable scaffolding that dropped half way down to the level of the stage, and hung suspended there in full view with a stage hand upon it. The audience, however, being a serious one, took as little note of the mishap as possible, and after a few moments the derelict was hoisted up again, without causing interruption to the progress of the drama.

The evening performance of "Rigoletto" was a noteworthy occasion, in that it brought back to the Metropolitan Opera House Mme. Melba as Gilda, after an absence of several years, during which she had formed an alliance with Mr. Hammerstein's establishment.

The record is worth noting in detail. Mme. Melba's last appearance at the Metropolitan Opera House was as Mimi in "La Bohème," on Dec. 16, 1904, when she undertook to begin a short series of special performances under Mr. Conried's management. But she was overtaken by a severe cold; and having struggled through her part in Puccini's opera, was unable to make her other promised appearances. She did not return to New York after this till she made her début at the Manhattan Opera House in January, 1907.

The performance last evening was also notable for bringing to the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House for the first time Mr. Renaud, who has established his great repuation in New York as a dramatic singer in the four years in which he was one of the pillars of Mr. Hammerstein's operatic venture. Mr. Constantino, who was also a member of Mr. Hammerstein s company, though for a much shorter period, likewise made his first appearance at the Metropolitan Opera House.

The performance last evening was made brilliant by the co-operation of these three admirable artists. Mme. Melba's voice was beautiful in its silvery richness and purity, its spontaneous outpouring. It was her voice in its best estate. "Rigoletto" is not a prima donna's opera, and Gilda has comparatively little of the brilliant singing of the prima donna to do. In the air, "Caro Nome," in the second act, Mme. Melba did much that was of her own supreme excellence in the florid and light and graceful style; although it may be that some could remember her singing of this air when there was even more lightness and grace than there was last evening, though hardly a more brilliant trill than that with which she ends the aria after she has disappeared into the house. Her more expressively dramatic singing in the duet with Rigoletto in the third act Mme. Melba has scarcely surpassed. She was most enthusiastically applauded.

Mr. Renaud's impersonation of the jester is one of the great figures of the operatic stage of this day. It is the outcome of a profound study of the character by a most accomplished actor; it is charged with tragic power and composed with infinite skill and resource and developed steadily to its climax. Mr. Renaud's voice is still a powerfully expressive organ, though freshness and resonant beauty of tone are not its chief characteristics, but it serves him well in the interpretation of the music, and it carries through the auditorium of the opera house.

The Duke, as represented by Mr. Constantino, is a conventional operatic personage, and his merits are those of the conventional operatic tenor, in every phrase and every high note and every posture. His brilliant and incisive tenor rang resonantly, and called forth many signs of approval, especially on the part of an industrious claque, thoughtfully provided for the occasion, that let no opportunity slip.

Mr. Didur was not so successful as the villainous Sparafucile as he has been in some other parts. Mr. Podesti conducted.

MARY GARDEN REFUSES ROLE

Will Not Sing In Production of Puccini's "Girl of Golden West" in Chicago

Miss Mary Garden will not create the title rôle of Puccini's "The Girl of the Golden West," as had been announced, when that work is given in Chicago. A rumor to this effect buzzed about the Metropolitan corridors yesterday. Miss Garden, when appealed to by telegram for a confirmation, sent the following:

"No rumor! Stern reality. Have all I can attend to with my French works."

"The Girl of the Golden West" will receive its first production on any stage with Mme. Destinn in the title part at the Metropolitan Opera House, probably on Dec. 6. Chicago was to be the second city to see it, with Miss Garden, and it was to be given in Boston with Mme. Carmen-Melis. Miss Garden evidently feels that she has enough to do without learning a new rôle in a kind of opera in which she has won none of her success.

COLUMBIA MUSIC RECITALS.

Under the direction of Arthur Whitney the Department of Music of Columbia University will give five expositions of classical and modern chamber music this Winter. The concerts will be held in the Horace Mann Auditorium, admission to which will be by ticket. Students and officers of the university will have the preference in the distribution of tickets, but the general public's applications will be considered two days before each recital. The programme of the recitals follows:

Dec. 1, 4:10 P. M.—French School of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries—Miss Edith Chapman, soprano; George Barlere, flute; Paul Kefer, viola da gamba; Mr. Whiting, harpsichord.

Dec. 9, 4:10 P. M.—French School of the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries—Miss Susan Metcalf, soprano; Mr. Whiting, pianoforte.

Jan. 18, 4:10 P. M.—Beethoven Programme—Artists to be announced.

Feb. 15, 4:10 P. M.—English and German Schools of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries—Artists to be announced.

March 15, 4:10 P. M.—Mozart, Beethoven, Brahms—The Kneisel Quartet.

First Friday Evening Dance.

The first of the Friday evening dances will take place this evening at the St. Regis, and many of the débutantes will be present. These dances are under the patronage of Mrs. George H. Clements, Mrs. James C. Colgate, Mrs. Percival Knauth, Mrs. John Bassett Moore, Mrs. Thomas Y. Sherman, Mrs. George A. Strong, and Mrs. S. Mallet-Prevost, most of whom will receive this evening's guests.

These dances are to be early affairs, and will stop at 12:30 o'clock. The guests are bidden for 9 o'clock, and the cotillion is to start in the marble ballroom at 10, and will be followed by a buffet supper and dancing.

Edward W. Sage and Miss Mallet-Prevost will lead from one end, and S. Mallet-Prevost and Miss Helen Adams of Baltimore will lead from the other. There are to be three more dances.

MAURETANIA'S CABINS FULL.

Two Cases of Measles Found in the Steerage.

The Cunard liner Mauretania, with crowded cabins, many of them containing persons socially prominent, arrived last evening from Liverpool and Queenstown. She did not break a record and her time for the passage was four days, 13 hours, and 36 minutes. Her average speed was 25.36 knots.

The Maurstania did not get away from Queenstown until 8:55 A. M. on last Sunday and she passed Daunts Rock at 9.33 A. M. Though the liner was abeam the Ambrose Channel light at 5:37 o'clock last night it was nearly 10 o'clock before her passengers came ashore. She was detained in Quarantine for some time while the health officials examined her 655 steerage passengers.

There were two cases of measles in the steerage and five persons of a family in the steerage were taken to Hoffman Island. On Wednesday George Chichester, a second cabin passenger died suddenly of heart disease. He was returning with his wife from a visit to England. He was an American, living in Massachusetts. His body was brought to port.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

At a meeting of the Authors' Producing Society, held at the offices of the President, John Cort, yesterday, it was decided not to place a company on the road in "The Gamblers" this season.

The cast of the Coburn Players, who are to present the "Elektra" of Euripides at the Hudson Theatre on Nov. 29, and "Elektra" and "Alcestis," the latter by Blanche Shoemaker Wagstaf, on Dec. 1, will include, besides Mr. and Mrs. Coburn, John E. Kellard, Howard Kyle, Albert Lang, Burr Caruth, Leopold Lane, Charlotte Lambert, Dorothy Turner, and Amelia Barleton.

When Henry B. Harris takes possession of the Hackett Theater on the first of next April, at the termination of the present lease, the house will be altered to conform with the regulations for the widening of Forty-second Street, and will be renamed the Comique. The opening attraction will be Rose Stahl in Charles Klein's new play, "Maggie Pepper."

Charles Frohman has made an arrangement whereby the English company now playing "Our Miss Gibbs" in America will sail for London on Wednesday, Dec. 7, to open at the Gaiety Theatre there in a new production in January. The American company of "Our Miss Gibbs" will resume its season's tour at the Colonial Theatre, Boston, on Feb. 6.

Mme. Marietta Olly will appear in the principal role in "Madame Troubadour" at the Lyric Theatre to-night. She was seen here last season in "The Whirlwind," an emotional drama, but she has been familiar with operetta in Vienna and Munich.

Anna Wheaton, the youngest member of the "Madame Troubadour" company at the Lyric Theatre, gave a combination Thanksgiving and birthday dinner to the members of the company after the performance last night. The members of her company presented her with a set of furs as a birthday gift.

TETRAZZINI HERE; MEETS INJUNCTION

WAS GOING WEST TO SING

Not Under Another Manager, Says Mr. Hammerstein—Holds That His Contract Still Stands.

Mme. Luisa Tetrazzini, who when last here was one of the stars in the Hammerstein constellation of opera singers, arrived on the Mauretania last night. Her name was not on the passenger list, but she was expected and waited for by representatives of the concert manager with whom she recently made a new contract, Mr. Leahy of San Francisco, and by representatives of Arthur H. Hammerstein, acting for his father. The Hammerstein representatives bore a temporary injunction, restraining the soprano from singing for another manager than Oscar Hammerstein, and this was served upon her before she landed.

Mr. Hammerstein's injunction is based on his contention that he still holds a contract with Mme. Tetrazzini, and does not intend to allow her to sing under any other management. Mme. Tetrazzini's intention was to start to-day for San Francisco, where she is announced to sing on Dec. 15. It will now be necessary for her to remain here until Dec. 2, pending a hearing of the injunction suit.

"When I sold out my interests to the Metropolitan Opera House," said Oscar Hammerstein last night, "a certain clause stated that such singers as did not wish to be transferred I would take care of in some manner. Mme. Tetrazzini was one of these. I wrote her that since she did not wish to go to the Metropolitan, I still regarded my contract as good and would send her out on a concert tour in the coming season. Later I sent her an advance on her salary and also her passage money at the proper time. Since then I have been waiting for her arrival. I have no intention of allowing her to sing under another management."

Mme. Tetrazzini's idea of the matter is that she had no contract with Mr. Hammerstein for this season, and that she had considered herself free to make such engagements as she might see fit.

The service of papers in the injunction suit on the singer aboard the Mauretania was not without friction. Louis J. Vorhaus of House, Grossman & Vorhaus, accompanied by Deputy United States Marshal Crawford, boarded the liner by permission of the customs officials the moment she reached her pier and hurried to the Tetrazzini suite. Tetrazzini was in the drawing room in conversation with her lawyer, Benjamin F. Spellman, and her friend, Signor Bazelli.

"Mme. Tetrazzini," said Mr. Vorhaus, "I have come to serve you with an order from the court restraining you pending a hearing on Dec. 2 from singing for any manager other than Mr. Oscar Hammerstein, who has a contract with you."

"I wish you to get out of this cabin," ordered Mr. Spellman warmly. "We do not want any of this theatrical business."

"I won't get out until I have finished my buhiness," retorted Mr. Vorhaus.

The prima donna, who did not understand a word of this, sat on the sofa and smiled amiably. Ignoring the glare cast upon him by Lawyer Spellman, Mr. Vorhaus addressed her again:

"Mme. Tetrazzini, will you accept service of this paper from the Deputy United States Marshal?"

Madame continued to smile amiably, not quite sure whether this was a welcoming delegation or a customs examination. Mr. Bazelli settled the argument by suggesting that if Mr. Vorhaus would leave the cabin Mme. Tetrazzini would accept service from the Deputy Marshal. This was agreed to and the formalities ended.

Mr. Vorhaus said that Mr. Hammerstein's contract with Mme. Tetrazzini provided that she was to sing either in opera or concert at the Manhattan Opera House or elsewhere in the United States.

"To show that Mme. Tetrazzini and Mr. Bazelli were of the opinion that Mr. Hammerstein's contract was still good," he said, "she cabled him on May 5 asking if she was free to make other engagements, and he replied: 'You are still under our management.'"

Mr. Spellman said that in Mme. Tetrazzini's view she had no contract with Mr. Hammerstein and was going to open a four months' concert tour in San Francisco. He produced a letter from the impresario to show that despite the legal difficulties they were still on friendly terms. One letter written in German read: "If all my artists had been as compatible as you I should not have been compelled to retire from opera."

Mme. Tetrazzini is to sing in Covent Garden next season and in the course of the season will take part in the coronation performance of opera on June 9. In May and June she is to sing at four special performances of opera in Paris.

MAURETANIA THE XMAS SHIP.

Cunarder Will Make Round Trip in Eleven Days to Deliver Mail.

In order that the heavy Christmas mails from this country and Canada shall arrive in England in time for delivery before Christmas Day, the Cunard Company has arranged that the Mauretania shall leave Liverpool on Saturday, Dec. 10, and arrive here, weather permitting, on Thursday night, Dec. 15, and sail for Liverpool at 9 A. M. on Saturday, Dec. 17. It is expected that the Mauretania will land her mails and passengers at Fishguard on Thursday, Dec. 22, thus making the round trip to New York and back in eleven days.

In case the liner is delayed by bad weather or fog and does not arrive here until Friday morning, she will be sent back in twenty-four hours. In addition to her mail, the Mauretania will carry Christmas presents which are being sent over by relatives to their families on the other side.

MRS. LEEDS ARRIVES.

Mrs. William B. Leeds, widow of the tinplate manufacturer, returned from Europe yesterday on the Cunard liner Mauretania accompanied by her son, W. B. Leeds, Jr., two maids, and a valet.

Mrs. Leeds kept to her suite until the liner arrived at her pier. She declined to discuss the eviction of her stepmother or the report of her engagement to Prince Joachim Murat, which Mrs. Leeds said had been repeatedly denied by her in America and on the other side since it was set afoot a year ago.

SOCIAL NOTES.

The Alexander Mortons closed their Southampton cottage the first of the week and are in town for the Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Tiffany Dyer are among those who have recently closed their Southampton villas and have arrived in New York for the season.

Mrs. McCormick-Goodhart of Chicago, a sister of Leander McCormick, has decided to remain abroad several years and to educate her sons at an English University.

Mrs. Francis W. Murray of 32 West Thirty-ninth Street, will give a tea on Dec. 3 for her débutante daughter, Miss Louise Murray.

Mrs. Goodrich Wyeth of 9 East Seventy-fifth Street, has invitations out for a dinner on Dec. 17.

Mrs. William S. Edgar will this afternoon give the first of two coming-out receptions for her daughter, Miss Mary C. Edgar, at her residence, 127 East Seventieth Street.

Mrs. Edward Menocal will give this afternoon at 204 West Fifty-fifth Street a coming-out reception for her daughter by her first marriage, Miss Marjorie Dodd. Mrs. Menocal was formerly Miss Agnes Kneeland.

Lewis Roberts of Yonkers, who tomorrow will marry Miss Charlotte Le Roy Glover at Fairfield, Conn., will have Russell C. Leffingwell for his best man, and the ushers are to be Arthur Waring Roberts, Rudolph Culver, A. Everett Hunt, Dawson Coleman Glover, Herbert Neal, John H. Hains, Richard Houghton and George Norton Miller, Jr.

Mrs. J. E. Fisher will give a small dinner and theatre party on Nov. 30 for her son, J. E. Fisher, Jr., who is a member of the senior class at Yale, and who will be 19 years old on the 30th.

Among the artists who will appear at Mr. Bagby's musical mornings in December at the Waldorf-Astoria are Mme. Melba, Mme. Sembrich, Miss Geraldine Farrar, and Mme. Schumann-Heink.

The twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Hennen Coddington (Miss Violet Cuchman) are to be christened to-day. The twins were born in August. Mr. and Mrs. Coddington were married about eighteen months ago, and are living at 44 East Seventy-ninth Street.

John G. Beresford, a cousin of Lord Beresford, who married Miss Emelie E. Iselin, has purchased a new estate on Davenport Neck, New Rochelle. The estate has a large residence on it, and will be the future home of the Beresfords.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Frelinghuysen have closed their villa at Tuxedo, and are in town for the Winter, but will spend Saturdays and Sundays during the season at the Tuxedo Club.

Mr. and Mrs. George Rose of Westbury, L. I., are in town, and are staying at the St. Regis.

Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Clark are planning to sail for Europe shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jewett Hallowell will close their Babylon (L. I.) house this week and move to the San Jacinto, 20 East Sixtieth Street, for the Winter.

Mrs. Henry Clinton Backus is giving an informal tea for Miss Katharine Day, daughter of Mrs. John C. Day of 28 Fifth Avenue, on Nov. 28, at 205 West Fifty-seventh Street. Miss Day sails on Nov. 30 to continue her art studies in Paris. Mrs. Edward R. Hewitt and Mrs. Thomas French will receive with Miss Day.

Sir H. Montague Allan of Montreal is at the Plaza awaiting the arrival of Lady Allan, who is a passenger on the Lusitania. After several days in this city, Sir Montague and Lady Allan will return to Canada for the Winter.

MISS EVELYN FRANCK WEDS.

The wedding of Miss Evelyn Franck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin C. Franck of 229 West Ninety-seventh Street, to Sidney A. Mandelberg of Omaha, Neb., was held last evening at the Hotel Savoy, the Rev. Dr. Abraham Simon of Washington, D. C., officiating.

She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Julius Weil, and Miss Ray Starr. Mrs. Weil wore a costume of pink satin veiled in pink chiffon, and carried pink roses. Miss Starr wore a gown of lace over white satin, and carried American Beauty roses.

Julius Weil acted as best man, and the ushers were Louis Gans, Herbert Salomon, Edward Friedman, and Lucien Franck.

The ceremony was performed at 6:30 o'clock, and there were thirty guests present. After the ceremony a supper was served to the bridal party and guests.

An interesting feature of the wedding was the announcement of the engagement of Miss Ray Starr, one of the bride's attendants, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Starr of 229 West Ninety-seventh Street, to Walter S. Einstein. It was also announced that the newly engaged couple will receive on Jan. 8 at 229 West Ninety-seventh Street from 3 to 6 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Mandelberg will spend a part of their bridal trip in the South.

Miss Mead Weds Horton Batchelder.

Miss Gwendolen Sedgwick Mead, granddaughter of the late William Ellery Sedgwick of Lenox, Mass., and a niece of Robert Sedgwick of 107 East Thirty-seventh Street, this city, was married yesterday in Boston to Horton Batchelder of Lakeville, Conn. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Theodore C. Williams at his house, 99 Mount Vernon Street, Boston.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Marshall B. Mead, who has a Summer home on the little island of Chappaquiddick, just off Martha's Vineyard. Mrs. Mead and her daughter have spent considerable of their time abroad.

Mr. Batchelder is the son of H. M. Batchelder, President of the Merchants' National Bank of Salem, Mass., and is master at the Hotchkiss Preparatory School at Lakeville. The couple will make their home in Lakeville.

Capt. J. K. Partello Weds Miss O'Brien

The wedding of Capt. Joseph K. Partello, Fifth United States Infantry, and Miss Josephine Terese O'Brien was celebrated in the chapel of St. Mary's Church at Troy, N. Y., at 11 A. M., Nov. 22. Miss O'Brien is the daughter of William D. O'Brien, a prominent business man of Troy, and Capt. Partello is the son of Major J. M. T. Partello of the Twenty-fifth United States Infantry, now stationed at Seattle, Wash. Major and Mrs. Partello attended the wedding.

The ceremony was semi-military, as the bridegroom, his best man, Lieut. Crystal of the Fifth Infantry, and Major Partello were in full-dress uniform. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Anna O'Brien.

HEFFNER—LEWIS.

Miss Mabel Christine Lewis, daughter of Mrs. Anna C. Lewis of East Orange, N. J., was married last evening to William L. Heffner of Washington, D. C., in the Bethel Presbyterian Church, the Rev. David O. Irving, pastor of the church, officiating.

The bride was attended by Miss Helen Heffner of Washington, sister of the bridegroom, as maid of honor, and four bridesmaids, the Misses Emily and Margaret Greenough of Montclair, cousins of the bride, Florence Briggs of Newark, and Edna Hemler of East Orange.

The best man was G. Westall Reade of East Orange, and the ushers were Francis H. McSorley, George W. Smith, Walter Greenough, and Wilson Smith, the latter from Baltimore, Md.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, 40 Meadow Street, East Orange. There were many guests present from this city and Washington.

"MARY MAGDALENE" FOR NEW THEATRE

REGULAR COMPANY TO TOUR

Maurice Maeterlinck's latest play will have its world premier at The New Theatre on Dec. 5. This play, a tragedy called "Mary Magdalene," has been only recently completed by the Belgian author, and is a work subsequent to his "Blue Bird" that The New Theatre produced this Fall. The English translation is by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos.

Olga Nethersole will play the principal rôle, and will be under the direction of Liebler & Co., who have arranged with The New Theatre management for two weeks at that house while the regular répertoire company is sent on a short road tour. The production of "The Arrow Maker," set for Dec. 5, has, therefore, been postponed until Dec. 19. In Miss Nethersole's support will be Arthur Forrest, Charles B. Hanford, Edward Mackay, Beatrice Moreland, and Wilfred Roger. The special music will be furnished by the Russian Symphony Orchestra, Modest Altschuler conducting.

This will be the first time that a Maeterlinck play has received its premier in America, but it will be the third Maeterlinck piece to be presented at The New Theatre. The other two are "The Blue Bird" and the mystery play, "Sister Beatrice." "Monna Vanna," "The Death of Tintageles," and, in operatic form, "Pélleas and Mélisande" are the only other plays by this author that have been given in New York, so far as the record shows.

The story of "Mary Magdalene" is founded on the Biblical account. Christ is represented by a voice. The piece is in three acts, laid in the garden of Annoeus Silanus, the villa of Mary, and in the house of Joseph or Arimathea. The music will consist of Oriental melodies and of Hebraic and Gregorian chants, which will be employed during the play and between the acts.

SAVAGE BACK FROM EUROPE.

Henry W. Savage returned from Europe on the Mauretania last night after a month or more spent abroad. He brought with him the manuscript and the rights of several foreign pieces for production here either this season or the next.

One of them is a light comedy called "Le Million," that is now being played at the Palais Royal, Paris. It is a story of Parisian Bohemia and is said to be free from any undue friskiness. London has contributed a new polite melodrama called "Lady Mortimer," by Major Herbert Woodgate, which Mr. Savage believes will prove popular here. He also brought final contracts for "Little Boy Blue," a Viennese operetta, by Henry Berent, Rudolph Schanzer, and Karl Lindau, and for another Viennese comedy, "Weeping Josephine," by Julius Engel, author of "Girls."

The English translation of the libretto of Puccini's "The Girl of the Golden West" was also brought over by Mr. Savage. With its production Mr. Savage will again enter the field of grand opera.

Mr. Savage will begin at once preparations for his midwinter productions. The first of these will be "The Great Name," in which Henry Kolker is to be starred. This play will have its premier in Chicago next month. Walter Browne's modern morality play, "Everywoman," will be the second. This will open in Boston in January and will be brought to New York immediately after its premier.

WAR SECRETARY'S SON DIES.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Secretary of War Dickinson received word to-night of the death of his son, Overton Dickinson, at Belle Mead Stock Farm, near Nashville, Tenn. The Secretary had just returned from a visit to his son, who had been ill, but whom he found apparently much improved. He left immediately to-night for Nashville.

Young Dickinson had been in ill health for more than a year and succumbed to heart disease. His illness was said to be due to shock following the death of his young wife some fourteen months ago. He was manager of the Secretary's stock farm.

Secretary Dickinson was to have entertained a large party at the Army-Navy football game on Saturday, and among his guests were to have been Mrs. and Miss Taft. Because of the death of his son the invitations have been recalled.

Black Opals

If beauty were the only gauge of price Black Opals would cost far more than diamonds, rubies or emeralds. No gem ever discovered contains in itself such marvels of vibrating color as do these stones recently discovered in New South Wales. Even the moderate priced specimens costing $50 or even $25 have charm beyond that of any crystal gem, while the choice pieces of black opal, costing from $500 to $1,000, are so bewilderingly beautiful that a description of the stones sounds like pure fancy or gross exaggeration.

Marcus & Company extend an invitation to their store, where the stones can be seen in appropriate settings and where it will at once be evident how inadequate are words to describe this new jewel.

NOTED MISSIONARY DEAD.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 24.—One of the most remarkable missionaries of modern times, the Rev. Dr. John Everett Clough, "The Apostle of the Telugus," died here this morning, and his wife, who is a sister of Prof. Walter Rauschenbusch of the Rochester Theological Seminary, is also ill at the hospital in which her husband died.

Dr. Clough gained great influence in his chosen field in India during the famine of 1877, when he took a prominent part in relief work, and following this more than 2,000 natives were baptized under him in one day in the Gundlacoma River and more than 10,000 others followed in one year. Two of Dr. Clough's five children are missionaries.

Dr. Clough will be buried in Newton Centre, Mass.

Old City Island Oysterman Dead.

John E. Price, one of the first oyster men on City Island, was found dead of paralysis at his home, 146 King Avenue, last night, by his son, William. He was 84 years old. He was known to every one on City Island, and until a few days ago was able to row around the island as easily as any boatman of the younger generation. He owned some property near his home.

Cardinal Samninatelli Dead.

ROME, Nov. 24.—Cardinal Samninatelli died to-day. He was born at Rindancondilla in 1840, and was proclaimed a Cardinal in 1901. Through his death the number of vacancies in the Sacred College is raised to nineteen.

Obituary Notes.

J. J. Reynolds of the Irish-American Athletic Club won the much-heralded Yonkers "Marathon" yesterday in 2:38:36 2-5. Daniel Sheridan of Toronto, Canada, finished second in 2:43:46 2-5, and William Galvin, Yonkers I. A. A. C., was third, his time being 2:45:30 1-5. Fifty-four men started. The distance was ninety yards over twenty-five miles, and led from the Hollywood Inn in Yonkers south on South Broadway to Valentine Lane, to Riverdale Avenue, north on which the trail led to Warburton Avenue to Hastings, to Farragut Road, to Saw Mill River Road, south to Tuckahoe Road, to Centre Avenue, to Yonkers Avenue to the Empire City race track, where the last nine miles were run.

Many men well known in the long-distance running game were among the competitors, and incidentally among the "also ran," being well outside the leading trio. Criticism was passed upon the management for having permitted the name of Jimmy George to be advertised as a competitor when as a matter of fact his name did not appear on the programme. George is a famous Indian runner, having won several Canadian events of importance during the past season. It is expected that the Registration Committee will act in the matter.

Thousands of interested spectators lined the course from end to end, and fully 5,000 persons flocked into the race track inclosure to witness what proved the grueling part of the race. This stage of the event showed conclusively that many of the lads had no right in a contest of such an exacting nature, many of them just crawling around the mile clipse to gain a souvenir and the doubtful honor of being game.

The efforts of some of the lads were pitiable to an extreme, the case of Charley Appleyard, the pacemaker for that portion of the journey from Hastings to the first circuit of the track, being particularly noticeable, running as he did during the stage mentioned in perfect style, and with a speed which carried him into the track with an average of six minutes to the mile.

That nature demanded retribution, however, was apparent after he had made one round of the track, as he required 6:48 for the mile. The next took up 7:16, with the average of the remainder being 8:00. After twenty miles he was all in, taking nearly fourteen minutes to get to the next mile post. Strangely enough, Ed Cotter of Toronto, who had been Appleyard's closest attendant all through that stage of the race, when they were outpacing everybody, blew up in the same mile where the latter experienced such a hardship in his desire to continue.

Sammy Mellor, who has probably run as many distance races as any lad of the period, succumbed after going about fourteen miles, and by the time he reached the track found himself about fifteen minutes to the bad of the leader, whom he had been closely chasing but four miles before. Sidney Hatch of Chicago, Bob Fowler of Boston and Fred Lorz, all veterans in the Marathon game, found themselves unable to overcome the effects caused by too much competition at this dangerous sport.

The course was probably as exacting as that which prompted a revival of marathoning, being well calculated by its heart-breaking hills to tax the stamina of better-fitted men than those who took part in yesterday's race.

HALLOWELL'S TIME PRIZE.

Paterson Distance Runner Shows Good Form In Lawrence A. C. Race.

The Lawrence Athletic Club held its initial cross-country handicap race yesterday over the Inwood Country Club golf course at Far Rockaway, L. I. Twenty-three competitors turned up for the event, with a keenly contested race the result. A. Moreda, Trinity A. C., (3 minutes,) was first past the finish line, with J. Williams, N. W. S. A. C., (3 minutes,) second, and J. Plant, Long Island A. C., (2:20 handicap,) third.

Harry Hallowell of the Paterson A. C., the scratch man, won the special fast time prize by covering the distance, a little over four miles, in 22:23, while W. Schreiber, National A. C., by doing 23:22, gained the second fast time prize.

GOLF ON LOCAL LINKS.

Two Tournaments Decided on Crescent Athletic Club Links.

There was an unusually large number of golfers at the Bay Ridge links of the Crescent Athletic Club yesterday. Two tournaments, each at eighteen holes medal play, were decided. The more important was the regular holiday handicap for prizes offered by Robert Geer, Jr. The event was won by K. B. Chadwick, who returned a card of 89, 16—73. In this event C. L. Schenck, H. O. Parsons, and E. W. Peck all tied with net scores of 74 for the second cup. It was decided that the three shall play off for the prize sometime before Sunday. The other event was for a cup offered by E. H. Peck. Only golfers who had never won a prize throughout the Summer were eligible to play for this prize. The winner was C. L. Schenck, who had a card of 92, 18—74. The cards:

Geer Cup, Eighteen Holes, Medal Play, Handicap.—K. B. Chadwick, 89, 16—73; C. L. Schenck, 92, 18—74; H. O. Parsons, 77, 3—74; E. W. Peck, 82, 8—74; C. F. Walden, 91, 16—75; A. S. Tripp, 91, 16—75; F. W. Manners, 99, 24—75; W. W. Freeman, 95, 18—77; E. W. Koehn, 91, 14—77; J. W. Parrish, 90, 13—77; A. A. Adams, 84, 6—78; C. B. Van Brunt, 86, 8—78; W. T. Smith, 95, 16—79; F. O. Denning, 85, 6—79; W. F. Bass, 103, 24—79; W. G. Parsons, 94, 14—80; A. Baxter, 92, 10—82; C. A. Freeburn, 107, 24—83; A. J. Sheldon, 105, 22—83; F. Dunderdale, 101, 18—83; G. W. Beckel, 96, 12—84; L. C. Hopkins, 98, 14—84; W. H. Parkinson, 99, 15, 84; E. S. MacDonald, 103, 18—85; W. E. Freeman, 104, 0—104.

Peck Cup, Eighteen Holes, Medal Play, Handicap.—C. L. Schenck, 92, 18—74; C. F. Walden, 91, 16—75; F. W. Manners, 99, 24—75; W. W. Freeman, 95, 18—77; A. A. Adams, 84, 6—78; W. T. Smith, 95, 16—79; W. F. Bass, 103, 24—79; W. G. Parsons, 94, 14—80; A. Baxter, 92, 10—82; C. A. Freeburn, 103, 20—83; A. J. Sheldon, 105, 22—83; W. H. Parkinson, 99, 15—84; E. S. MacDonald, 103, 18—85; W. E. Freeman, 104, 0—104.

A varied programme lent zest to the Thanksgiving Day competitions at the Baltusrol Club. F. O. Vanderpoel, Jr., won the eighteen-hole medal play handicap with 81, 6—75, and the same card also earned for him first share in the sweepstakes. There was a tie for second between J. S. Woodward, 2d, Daniel Adams, Jr., and T. C. Ennever with 86, 6—80, 90, 11—80, and 91, 11—80, respectively.

The ringer contest, which began on Sept. 2, ended yesterday and resulted favorably for James A. Tyng, who had 16 ringers. J. S. Woodward, 2d, and T. T. Reid were close seconds with 15 ringers. Tyng's selected score was 58, as follows:

James A. Tyng—
Out .....4 4 2 4 3 4 4 4 3—30
In .....3 3 3 2 3 4 4 4 3—28—58

The second round in the November cup contest was also played. A special prize, presented by George Low for the highest net score in the handicap, went to Henry Halsey. The scores and summary follow:

F. O. Vanderpoel, Jr., 81, 6—75; W. L. Garey, 90, 10—80; Howard Hasbrook, 91, 11—80; E. B. Byron, 102, 20—82; F. N. Cowperthwaite, 100, 18—82; W. E. Murdock, 98, 15—83; J. R. Shannon, 100, 16—84; Paxton Brown, 105, 20—85; C. F. Shalleron, 103, 18—90; Henry Halsey, 107, 11—96.

November Cup, Second Round.—Dr. J. R. Shannon beat T. C. Watkins 1 up; J. S. Woodward, 2d, beat F. A. L'Hommedieu 2 up; Howard Hasbrook beat T. T. Reid 5 up and 4 to play; D. W. Granbery beat Oscar Woodward 2 up.

In the last regularly scheduled competitive event of the season at the Nassau Country Club yesterday, Henry Cape won the eighteen-hole medal play handicap with a card of 86, 15—71. So long as the weather remains open, however, ball will be batted about. The next Saturday's matches will be run off on Saturdays. Members expect to get in their new home about Dec. 15. Plans have been made for the annual club dinner to be held at the Plaza Hotel the evening of Dec. 17. The scores in yesterday's handicap were as follows:

Henry Cape, 86, 15, 71; W. I. Frothingham, 96, 25, 73; H. M. Crane, 89, 17, 72; D. A. Loring, Jr., 88, 18, 75; W. E. Kimball, 96, 20, 76; Judson Lounsbury, 96, 20, 76; B. N. Busch, 86, 11, 75; H. L. Pratt, 89, 9, 80; W. A. Stuart, 95, 15, 80; A. C. Sumner, 98, A. 80; W. Gardner, 98, 17, 81; W. F. Richards, 92, 11, 81; R. T. McGusty, 99, 17, 82; E. F. Willard, 111, 28, 83.

Delightful weather brought out many of the Fox Hills golfers yesterday. The attraction was the Thanksgiving Day Cup. Frank Barnett followed up his horse show winnings by winning at golf also. Mr. Barrett won the trophy offered by the Tournament Committee with a score of 83, 10—73. Others who competed were: W. W. Van Lean, 82, 6—76; D. W. Peterkin, 91, 15—79; J. B. Eddelman, 88, 12—76; J. F. Lee, 97, 20—77; E. M. Pesey, 92, 15—77; J. S. Meredith, 99, 22—77; A. L. L. Cameron, 88, 10—78; J. E. O'Donohue, 91, 13—78; H. F. Ives, 89, 9—80; J. M. Munose, 92, 12—80; H. M. Turk, 102, 20—82; C. H. Hadlock, 100, 18—82; Albert Britt, 98, 14—84; W. P. Haskill, 100, 15—85; M. L. Fearey, 94, 7—87.

In the semi-finals for the Richmond Cup G. E. Armstrong beat J. F. Tobin by default; M. L. Fearey beat J. M. Munose, 1 up, 27 holes. The winner of Class A and B competition combined was J. O. Eddelman, 86, 12—74.

YONKERS BOY IN FRONT.

Athletes of the Yonkers Young Men's Christian Association are quickly forging their way to the front, for only last Saturday a team of cross-country runners carrying the colors of this organization captured the honors in the National junior cross-country championship at Celtic Park and yesterday the novice delegation from Yonkers journeyed over to Schuetzen Park and won first place in the novice road run of four miles, held by the Warren A. C., with a total of 46 points, the Mohawk A. C. of the Bronx being second with 47, while the Union Settlement A. C. and St. Mary's A. C. tied for third place with 72 points each.

Forty-five men started in the event, of which thirty-one finished the course, and owing to their lack of experience many of the novices set out early at a fast pace, but were compelled to yield to those who measured their distances and gauged their pace that finally brought them home in the lead.

James McGredden of the Yonkers Y. M. C. A. was first to cross the finish line, covering the course in 19:35, leading C. Green of the Mohawk A. C., who finished second by 5 seconds, only a short distance separating them. McGredden took the lead in the last half mile and put up a hard struggle for the premier position, finishing with a good sprint. The order of finish:

AUTOS MAKE FAST TIME ON OLD TRACK

The old Guttenberg race track, which has been used recently for motorcycle racing, was transformed into a motor-drome yesterday for the Hudson County automobile race meet, closed to cars nominated by the Hudson County auto dealers. Fully 5,000 persons crowded the stands, and around the mile circular track, and there were some 300 machines parked in the infield.

Before the races, while De Palma was warming up in his sixty-horse-power Fiat Cyclone, and was traveling faster than a mile a minute, one of the rear wheels threw a tire. The tire shot into the air and grazed De Palma's face. His lip was cut and several of his teeth were loosened.

There were five races, for which there was, with the exception of one, a large field of starters. The drivers who attracted the greatest interest of the afternoon were Ralph De Palma and Robert Burman, who participated in the recent Grand Prize race of the Automobile Club of America at Savannah. De Palma won the ten-mile free-for-all with his Fiat Cyclone. But in the twenty-mile free-for-all a mishap occurred which sent him out while he was leading the other starters.

Burman, in the Marquette-Buick, with which he finished third in the Grand Prize, covered ten circuits in 9 minutes 57 seconds. This was only an exhibition event for Burman alone, but his daring aroused as much interest as did the other events in which more were entered.

The first real racing, however, came in the second event, the ten-mile free for all, in which ten cars participated. As Starter Blakeslie fired the shot, De Palma sent his Fiat Cyclone to the front, and on the first turn was hugging the rail with a lead of about ten yards over the second car, a National, driven by Tettlers. De Palma sent his car around the track at a fast clip and at the end of the first lap had a lead of about a sixth of a mile on the National. The first mile was covered in 1 minute 7 seconds from a standing start, and two miles were reeled off by De Palma in 2 minutes 5 seconds, the second mile being covered in 58 seconds. On the ninth mile De Palma had lapped the entire field. He won by a good margin in 10 minutes 16 2-5 seconds. Tettlers, in a high-seated National, finished second with Beach's Buick taking third.

The first mishap of the racing occurred in the third event, a fifteen-mile stock chassis race for cars with a displacement ranging from 231 to 300 cubic inches. Only two cars started, a Pullman (Rouse,) and a Mitchell, (Wilhelms.) Rouse lapped Wilhelms on the fifth mile and had the best part of another lap over him when as his Pullman was turning into the back stretch, his front axle snapped. Rouse brought his car to a quick stop and no one was injured. Wilhelms finished the fifteen miles in 20 minutes 21 2-5 seconds.

The feature event of the day was a twenty mile free-for-all, in which eleven cars started, has simply gone in for work, and lots of it, and when he enters the ring against Smith he will be fit to make his opponent step lively. The preliminary of six rounds is regarded as almost as promising as the Goodman-Smith bout. Barry Hill, the little ex-amateur, and Young Reilly are to have it out.

The present season has seen remarkably fast time in American road racing. Tetlaff's great performance places the American record close to the world's record for road racing, made by Felice Nazzaro, who averaged 74¼ miles an hour in the Boulogne road race a few years ago over a course that was as smooth as a billiard table. In the Grand Prize at Savannah Bruce-Brown in a Benz made the remarkable time of 70.55 miles an hour, and in the Vanderbilt Cup race the Alco, driven by Harry Grant, made a new record for that eevnt—64 miles an hour.

Meer Wins Fancourt Run.

The weekly road run of the Fancourt Club was captured by William Meyer of the home club. His time was 18 minutes. I. Garsch of the Sheridan A. C. was second, almost 400 yards behind the winner. Close on Garsch's heels was J. Levy, the former Sprocket A. C. runner. Meyer took the lead from the start and was never headed. A large field started, including many high school athletes who are training for the championships. The first ten men to finish were W. Meyer, Fancourt Club; I. Garsch, Sheridan A. C.; J. Levy, unattached; I. Feinberg, Morris A. C.; H. Lichtenstein, Fancourt Club; J. Marcus, De Witt Clinton H. S.; M. Summers, Sheridan A. C.; S. Seid, Morris A. A.; G. Crowley, Keystone A. C.; B. Lichtman, College Settlement.

Bedford Athletic Club Bouts.

The Bedford A. C. of Brooklyn announces the following card for to-night in Congress Hall: Main bout of ten rounds, at 125 pounds, between Dave Hayes and Frankie Pass; six rounds, Young Kitson vs. Joe Bell; four rounds, Tommy Shea vs. Young McDonough, Jack Burgess vs. Willie Mack, and Jim Barry vs. Jack Glick. There will also be a battle royal.

Goodman and Sammy Smith.

Unusual interest is centred in the boxing bout between Jack Goodman and Young Sammy Smith of Philadelphia at the National Sporting Club to-night. The last time these boys met the milling was so close that there was considerable opinion expressed as to who was the victor. To-night's match should settle the controversy. Smith has fought two battles since he met Goodman, but West Side Jack has taken no such chances. Smith, it is said, has simply gone in for work, and lots of it, and when he enters the ring against Smith he will be fit to make his opponent step lively. The preliminary of six rounds is regarded as almost as promising as the Goodman-Smith bout. Barry Hill, the little ex-amateur, and Young Reilly are to have it out.

De Oro Wins Two Pool Games.

Alfred De Oro, who is practicing for his coming championship match with Jerome Keogh, which is to be decided next week, played two games of pool yesterday and won both matches. In the afternoon game De Oro defeated W. Ghent by the score of 125 to 68. De Oro made a high run of 27. In the evening contest De Oro easily defeated Al Sanders by the score of 125 to 40. De Oro's high run was 31.

RECORD FOR LOZIER CAR.

Tetlaff Drives 151.506 Miles on Santa Monica Course in 2:04:10 4-5.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Nov. 24.—Teddy Tetlaff in a Lozier car established a new American record in the 151.506-mile stock car race over the Santa Monica course to-day. The eighteen laps were completed in 2:04:10 4-5 for an average of 73 29-100 miles an hour. This is but one mile an hour under the world's record, made by Nazarre. Bert Dingley in a Pope-Hartford finished second in 2:10 3-5. The Franklin was third, its time not being taken, as it stopped at the end of the sixteenth lap.

J. McKeague, driving a Durocar, was first in the 231.300 class, winning by a margin of three minutes over the Maxwell, second. The Petrel car was third.

The Lozier won the free-for-all race, averaging 71¼ miles an hour for the full distance of 202.8 miles. The Hartford was second. Time—3:04:47 1-5. The Knox took third place. No time was taken, as the car was flagged in the twenty-third lap.

Tetlaff's great performance places the American record close to the world's record for road racing, made by Felice Nazzaro, who averaged 74¼ miles an hour in the Boulogne road race a few years ago over a course that was as smooth as a billiard table. In the Grand Prize at Savannah Bruce-Brown in a Benz made the remarkable time of 70.55 miles an hour, and in the Vanderbilt Cup race the Alco, driven by Harry Grant, made a new record for that eevnt—64 miles an hour.

East Orange Loses to Newark.

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 24.—Seized with a bad attack of the rattles to-day, the East Orange High School football team handed the interscholastic championship of the State to the team of the Newark High School by a score of 16 to 0. The local team went into the contest with every prospect of giving a good account of itself, if not defeating Newark, but from the start of the contest fumbles and weak plays stood between East Orange and progress. At the end of the first half the score was 5 to 0 against them, Newark having made a touchdown. Things went from bad to worse in the second half, when a blocked kick and a forward pass gave eleven points more to the victors.

Do you realize what has been going on?

But for years wool has gone up and up.

Gradually the number of ounces of wool in the average man's winter suit has decreased—until now many winter suits weigh no more than did summer suits in the good old days.

So if you ask us for a winter suit, we'll show you one of full weight—if you really want a medium weight of course we have that, too.

Your Money And Ours

We are not prejudiced when we say that the investor who purchases one, or any number, of the bonds which we offer for sale enters into a peculiarly intimate and beneficial relation with us and with the companies whose securities we handle.

This is due to the fact that we ourselves operate these companies and are heavy and permanent holders of their stocks. Our money and the money of bond holders lies side by side and the interests of the latter must be considered before our own.

We are now offering a fully secured first Mortgage Bond of an Electric Light and Power Company at a price to yield 6%.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Money was in increased demand to-day in preparation for month-end payments, and discount rates were firm.

The approach of the settlement checked business on the Stock Exchange. Mexican and Brazilian issues were weak on the unfavorable reports from those quarters. Kaffirs were steady, but copper shares closed easy.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 4⅞@5 per cent. The rate of discount in the open market for three months' bills is 4 15/16@4 9-16 per cent.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: At Madrid, 7.00; at Lisbon, 8.00.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Trading was dull, but prices were steady on the Bourse to-day.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—Trading was quiet on the Boerse to-day.

Vessels in the Form of Double Kettles Subject of Controversy.

Failing to make the correct claim, the Board of United States General Appraisers has denied a protest filed by the Lamar Chemical Works of Newark regarding the classification to be accorded metal vessels in the form of double kettles used for reducing chemicals. While the Collector's return is held not to be correct, it is allowed to stand owing to the importer's failure to make the right claim for duty.

It appears that the inner kettle is of enameled iron, while the outer is a black iron casting, which has been machined, drilled, and otherwise finished. The two in use are bolted together. On the invoice the inner and outer kettle are itemized separately, and were returned for duty, the inner at the rate of 40 per cent. ad valorem, under Paragraph 158, as "hollow ware of iron or steel," and the outer at 45 per cent. ad valorem, under Paragraph 199, as "articles of iron or steel wholly manufactured." Only the outer vessel appears to have been in controversy, and this the importing concern claimed should be admitted to duty under either Paragraphs 147 or 148 as castings of iron.

General Appraiser Fischer, who writes the decision for the board, says: "We regard this double kettle as an entirety, and in our opinion duty should have been assessed on the entire article under Paragraph 158. The protest complains of the assessment on the outer kettle, but does not raise the proper claim. This being so, we overruled the protest without affirming the decision of the Collector."

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, bearing date the 27th day of October, 1910, I, the undersigned, the Referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, Nos. 14 and 16 Vesey Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 12th day of December, 1910, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Herbert A. Sherman, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows: All that certain plot, piece, or parcel of land, situate, lying, and being in the Borough of the Bronx, City of New York, County and State of New York, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point in the easterly line of a strip of land located and laid out as Findlay Avenue by the Commissioner of Street Improvements of the 23d and 24th Wards of the City of New York under authority of Chapter 545 of the Laws of 1890, on maps adopted June 17, 1895, distant five hundred and fourteen and sixty-nine one hundredths (514.69) feet north from a point in said line where it is intersected by the northerly line of lands late of William H. Morris; and running thence easterly one hundred and one and eighty-six one hundredths (101.86) feet more or less to a point in the westerly boundary line of lands conveyed by Anna M. Z. de Montsaulnin to Ephraim B. Levy by deed dated June 18, 1897, and recorded in New York County Register's office on July 22, 1897, in Liber 29, Section 11, of Conveyances, Page 127, distant as measured along said last-mentioned boundary line four hundred and ninety-five and four-tenths (495.4) feet north from the intersection of said last-mentioned boundary line with the northerly boundary line of lands late of William H. Morris; thence northerly along said westerly boundary line of lands conveyed to Levy as aforesaid, one hundred and ten and ninety-five one hundredths (110.95) feet; thence easterly on a deflection to the right of sixty-eight degrees two minutes and thirty-four seconds (68° 2' 34") and still along the boundary line of said lands conveyed to said Levy as aforesaid, three and thirty-eight one hundredths (3.38) feet; thence northerly on a deflection to the left from the last-mentioned course of seventy-three degrees and forty seconds (73° 40") and still along the westerly line of lands conveyed to said Levy as aforesaid, one hundred and sixty-six one hundredths (100.66) feet to the curved line or corner formed by the junction of the easterly line of the strip of land located and laid out as Findlay Avenue by said Commissioner on said maps with the westerly line of a strip of land located and laid out as Teller Avenue by said Commissioner on said maps; thence southwesterly, on a curved line along the easterly line of said strip of land located and laid out as Findlay Avenue by said Commissioner on said maps, two hundred and forty-eight and sixty-eight one hundredths (248.68) feet to the point or place of beginning.

Dated, Nov. 18, 1910.

BOY PLAYING INDIAN SHOT AND KILLED

Little Comrade Accidentally Puts a Bullet in His Body, Then Carries Him Home.

WERE OUT AS RAGAMUFFINS

Victim Died in His Mother's Arms Before a Physician Could Reach Him.

Thirteen-year-old Harry Joel of 378 Baldwin Avenue, Jersey City, while at play yesterday afternoon in an open lot at Baldwin Avenue and Fleet Street was shot in the breast by Walter Landmesser, also 13 years old, of 376 Baldwin Avenue. He died about an hour later in the arms of his mother at their home.

The Landmesser boy, who is known as "Tinker," after shooting young Joel, picked him up in his arms and carried him home to his mother. He told Mrs. Joel that Harry had been shot, but not seriously, and ran away. The police are looking for him. He is supposed to be in hiding.

The Joel boy and Landmesser, with several other boys, were dressed as ragamuffins, representing different characters. The Joel boy was fixed up in Indian costume and the Landmesser boy as a cowboy. The Joel boy had a revolver, and for the amusement of the other boys was shooting at a tin can in the lot. Every time a shot was fired the boys would dance around in Indian fashion, whooping and yelling.

After two or three shots had been fired the revolver failed to work. The Joel boy couldn't get it to snap and handed it to young Landmesser, who said he would fix it. He tinkered with it for a few minutes, and suddenly shouted: "Now she'll work." The boys gathered about him and several of them said: "You haven't fixed it."

Landmesser, who had been sitting on the ground, arose and pointed the revolver away from him and pressed his finger on the trigger. The Joel boy started to run by the pointed weapon just as there was a report, and he fell to the ground.

"He's shot, he's shot!" cried out the other boys. They gathered around him and lifted his head up. He looked around pitifully and said in a weak voice: "Don't tell my mother; I'll be all right in a little while."

The boys became frightened, and one or two of them ran away. Landmesser, with tears in his eyes, knelt down beside his playmate and asked: "Harry, are you hurt much? Where do you feel the pain?" The Joel boy pointed to his chest. One boy said: "Maybe he's going to die."

"Well, if he is he won't die here," said young Landmesser, and he grabbed the limp form in his arms and started off for the Joel home. At the door Mrs. Joel, who was getting supper ready for the family, met the boys. When she saw her son in Landmesser's arms she took him and ran into the house. The Landmesser boy followed her and assured her that nothing serious had happened. He said that Harry had fallen in the lot, but would be all right in a little while. Then he started away. He was out of sight before anybody had a chance to call him back.

When a doctor arrived the boy was dead.

WILSON TALKS ON AMERICA.

Our Unrest and Our "Appetite for Legislation"—Law Can't Make Progress.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 24.—Dr. Woodrow Wilson, Governor-elect of New Jersey, delivered an address this morning on "The Spirit of America" before an audience that crowded the Har Sinai Temple to the doors. Dr. Lewis B. Michaelson, rabbi of the temple, in introducing the speaker, said:

"One of the things for which to be grateful in New Jersey to-day is that a man has been elected Governor who represents the service of humanity in the truest sence."

Dr. Wilson spoke of the many elements that have entered into the building of the American Nation, and said that the occasional feeling of unrest was due to the fact that these elements have not been formed into a definite National life. God, he said, is still sifting the nations to plant seeds in America. Restriction of immigration is not to be recommended, neither is its encouragement so desirable as the helping of the immigrant.

Progress was defined by Dr. Wilson as a movement toward a definite object, and the application of the best means to the best ends. He said that Americans have great faith in statutes, probably because of their faith in ideals. The appetite for legislation is one of the most conspicuous things about the spirit of America to-day, he declared.

"I believe," Dr. Wilson observed, "that law is not a dynamic force. Its object is to hold things where they are. It makes fast what has been achieved. True progress must be in the lives and hearts of the people rather than in a slavish dependence upon laws."

FORTUNE THANKSGIVING DAY.

Two Orange Men Inherit $100,000 That Chance Brings to Them.

Thanksgiving Day for the children of the late Jacob Deckenbach, formerly a resident of Orange, has a peculiar significance, for it brings the news that they are probably heirs to a fortune of $100,000 left by their father. Chance alone has placed them in the way of benefiting as his heirs, the administrators of his estate having discovered the existence of the children only through a land search made by a prospective purchaser of a block in Portland, Ore., worth $40,000. The search brought inquirers to Orange, and the information they obtained here was to the effect that the children were living.

Those who are to benefit are John and Adam Deckenbach. Neither of the men is well supplied with wealth.

Jacob Deckenbach went West thirty-five years ago. He was not heard of for years, but at the time of his death, three years ago, in Portland, a small sum was given to each son. One of the questions to be answered is why the small sum was forwarded and no division of the estate made, nor any information of its size communicated.

WOMAN HELD FOR FORGERY.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 24.—Mrs. Minnie Frederick, wife of Walter Frederick, the Postmaster at Delawanna, Passaic County, is held in $2,000 bail by United States Commissioner Nelson on a charge of forgery. She is alleged to have forged the name of her father-in-law to a check sent to him by a firm in South Jersey.

When her father-in-law wrote to the firm asking for the money he was informed that a check had been sent to him. Mrs. Frederick assisted her husband in his Post Office business, and another charge in connection with that is now pending against her.

Winter Suits

IT would take many pages of this paper to describe our entire stock of Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothes, and then the description would be inadequate,—So many are the models, so varied the patterns. We must generalize, so we say that we have models here to fit everybody; patterns to suit every taste; prices that meet the requirements of every pocketbook. And one word more, those prices are, in every case, lower than they would be were our clothes priced by others' standards.

At $20, $22.50 and $25, are suits and overcoats that otherwhere sell at from $5 to $10 more than we ask.

The Dead Man's Wife

The Dead Man's Son

The Son's Mother

The Desire to Kill a Dead Man

The above is the triangle of personalities that is presented in the absorbing novel—"On the Branch." Only a French woman has the genius to solve such a problem, and the author of "On the Branch" is French and the woman in the book is French. She tells her own story.

The same day this woman's husband died (they had lived together fifteen years) she discovered that he had a son, by another woman. Imagine her feelings—astonishment, grief, despair, then rage—a terrible rage which she called "the desire to kill a dead man!"

The widow spent fifteen years "on the branch," that is, living at hotels in various cities, and then one day came face to face with her husband's son and the other woman. Her story, both before and after this meeting, is told in a way that will gratify every reader.

"ON THE BRANCH"

explains how a woman without kith or kin, her youth gone, and all the happiness she had known in life wrecked by Fate, seeks and finds a higher and better plane of existence. Unaided, she tapped new reservoirs of happiness, after a cloud had settled, seemingly forever, over her life. It will do you a world of good to read how she did it.

The woman ceases to be a stranger to you after you have read a few pages. You imagine you know just how she looks and what her voice sounds like. Her personality comes right out of the pages into the room with the reader. You don't have to be a woman to enjoy this book—but if you are a woman, you simply cannot help it.

"On the Branch" will give you everything you expect to find in a book—and a few things you might not be expecting. It has interest, action, intensity—and considerable thought.

"On the Branch" is translated from the French of Pierre de Coulevain, by Alys Hallard. $1.25 net at any book store and by
